INTRODUCTION

Born in 1824 (Thursday, the 23rd of September) Vikrama Sanvat 1881, Bhadrapada Shukla 9, (midday), Swami Dayananda Sarasvati Ji bore the name "Dayarama", his horoscopic name being "Moola Shankra". His parents were very strict orthodox Brahmins of the old type, who, though now somewhat rare, are still, lingering all over India. His father Karsanji (Krishna Ji) Lalji Tripathi was a man of position and authority in State affairs and was known to be very wealthy in the town of Tankara, Morvi State, (Kathiawada) and surroundings. Strict in his way of life, he had his own principles which did not allow him to stoop to any meanness. He was a man of character, though of very strong Pauranic leanings. Dayarama's mother, Rukminiba was a lady of a charitable disposition, but, like her husband, very careful in the observances of her Pauranic religious faith. She too like her husband had a very strong moral character.

Hence little Dayarama was brought up as a good pious Hindu boy, and taught Gujarati, his mother tongue, and Sanskrita so that by the 14th year of his age, he had memorised the whole of the Yajur-Veda and a large number of texts from the other Vedas, had completely studied the Sarasvata Vyakarna, knew many Sanskrit prose and poetical pieces by heart, and had a good knowledge of the general classical Sanskrita literature. This substantial education stood him in good stead in his later life.

In spite of his education and his home breeding, Mool Shankar or Daya Rama had a very inquisitive mind which never allowed him to remain in peace when a doubt arose but compelled him to spare no pains till he went to the very root of it and unearthed every thing. This great trait which he carried in his soul but did not derive from his parentage, was the most remarkable feature of his life, for, that is exactly what gave him the greatness of personality and the importance to his works for which we honour him, and that is what brought him in the front rank of those reformers who are also scholars. His early youth could not, therefore, have been very quiet though we have no records to go by.

A few events in his life in the family provided the turning point that completely transformed him, leading him far beyond his own and his parent's expectations. These incidents, however, were not in any way extraordinary or marvellous, for such do occur in the life of every one, but the ordinary run of mankind never take any notice of them, much less derive any instruction from them.

Karsanji Lalji had early initiated his son, Dayarama, into the secrets of the cult of his family God Siva. In 1837 (V.S.) (1894, A.C.) Magha, Krishna Paksha 14th he directed his own son to observe a fast, keep a vigil at night, and worship the Shivalinga (Mahadeva) a temple in the neighbourhood on Shivaratri day. Dayarama's mother protested considering the tender age of the robust little fellow, who, perhaps, found it difficult to keep fasts, but to no avail, for her husband, a very strict man, paid no heed to her objections and entreaties.

Dayarama, barely thirteen, observed the fast and kept the vigil in right earnest without any flaw. During the second performance of the worship of the Shivalinga which is usually done 4 times on Shivaratri, the little boy found all the devotees, the Pujari and his own father included, fast asleep. He, however, was wide awake, observing the stone Linga and expecting, perhaps, same miracle. A miracle, however, was awaiting him.

The flowers and oblations of edibles heaped upon the Shivalinga had attracted a number of hungry and avaricious rats, and the mischievous creatures were making inroads upon the things climbing freely on the Linga, the Symbol of the great and terrible God Shiva. The little boy was surprised that the mighty and the terrible Rudra had absolutely no power over the vile, dirty execrable creatures that were polluting His Symbol. He awakened his devout but sleeping father and questioned him about the troublesome matter, but whatever answer the sleeping man made did not satisfy the inquisitive boy. Of a very developed and cultivated mind, though still very young, Dayarama lost all faith in his family god, hated idolatry, and took a vow to search the true Mahadeva and to go to the root of the whole affair of the Shivapuja and all else that concerned so-called-Parthiva puja, image worship. He broke his vigil early, went home, and ate. This was the beginning of his doubts about the truth of popular religion. Though some vestiges of devotion to Shiva inculcated by his father lingered in Dayarama till late in life, yet, never more did he soil his noble soul by taking part in idol worship.

In 1839 (V.S. 1896) his younger sister departed this life by Cholera. This circumstance touched him to the quick setting his troubled heart astir to investigate into the real nature of earthly life. 'But still the hardy lad did not seem to be much affected

A short period of about 2 years and more elapsed, leaving the inquisitive boy with his books, when, at last in 1842 came the last straw that broke the camel's back. His dear uncle, the dearest friend he had on earth died of the same fell disease which had deprived Dayarama of his dear sister. This bereavement was, however, too much for the youth. Hardy as he was, he shed copious tears for days for his dear elderly friend and well-wisher. Karsanji's late younger brother was an educated man of very good righteous inclinations, and he had the knack to solve his intelligent young nephew's astounding difficulties. Hereafter poor Dayarama had no peace. He completely lost what little interest he had in the world's affairs and fully focussed all his attention on his Sanskrita's studies, longing to go deep and realise soul and the Almighty (Mahadeva).

Dayarama had acquired all the education that Tankara could afford and now wished to go to Kashi the reputed stronghold of Sanskrita learnig to become a full-fledged pandit. The idea was good but his wordly-wise parents wished to get him somehow saddled with matrimony. He was therefore sent to a neighbouring town to a reputed pandit to study further. He was not; however, left alone with his books by his parents, for, how could they, when he was not a boy now, but a young man? Hence marriage preparations began with full force.

This was in 1845 (V.S. 1902) when Dayarama was twenty-two, a very good age for marriage. Hence it was only right and human that his parents should feel anxious for his future, but they had been counting without their host. The Divine Impulse was working within him, he had heard the call, he must go in search of the real Shiva. He sets his face against attractions of the world and leaves his rich father's house.

Wandering about in quest of learned Sadhus Dayarama came across a sannyasin at Shaila who advised him to enter the novitiate as a regular (naishtika) brahmacharin which idea highly appealed to the young man and he did as advised assuming the name Shuddha Chaitanya. He discarded his plain clothes and put on saffron robes. This transformation ended most of his minor difficulties. He could now move about freely as a sadhu without arousing any body's suspicion. But being only a brahmacharin he still had the botheration of preparing his own food which taxed his energies and took a good deal of his precious time. He therefore longed to become a full-fledged sannyasin.

But he was not out of danger yet, for his father knowing his whereabouts came with a posse of his policemen and seized him at Siddhapur where a fair was now afoot. The irate man tore the brahmachari's saffron robes, rated him downright for disgracing the good name of his ancestors by embracing a life of beggary, and would have succeeded in carrying him back home had it not been for his dear habit of sleeping at night which had the better of him now as once before on that fateful Shivaratri of which the reader knows well: Karsanji Lalji along with his otherwise watchful policemen slept and the wily brahmachari Shuddha Chaitanya who was biding his time decamped: nevermore was that wily creature caught by his sleepy father.

Well aware of the dangers of being nearer home the vigilant Shuddha Chaitanya now went farther still. In his wanderings farther and farther he came to Chanoda on the bank of the Narmada where with some difficulty he succeeded in becoming a full-fledged sannyasin assuming the name Dayanada Saraswati under the direction of Swami Purnananda Saraswati, a Maharashtri Dandi Sannyasin.

The purpose of his life as he himself writes in his autobiography is the "Pursuit of truth in thought, speech and deeds". He wandered over mountains and plains for more than 15 years visiting Sadhus and Sannyasins—with difficulties and tortures which an ordinary man cannot bear, sometimes endangering life for days without food, on the snowy peaks without clothes. After all he was successful and finds the Truth for which he left his home and now to complete his studies once again at the age of 36 he becomes a pupil sitting at the feet of Swami Vrijananda Saraswati, the great grammarian and Vedic scholar.

In 1860 (V.S. 1917) he went to Muttra, and commenced studying under the great grammarian and Vedic scholar, Swami Virjananda Saraswati. Virjananda disabused Dayananda's mind of all the fallacious ideas he had got from spurious learning, gave him a good grounding in the Ashtadhyayi of Pannini, the genuine ancient Sanskrita Grammar, with its great commentary, the renowned Mahabhashya of Patanjali, and introduced him to the treasures of Vedic Lore.

He took leave of his great Guru Virjananda in 1863 (V.S. 1920), a finished scholar, and an able dialectician, with the injunction of propagating the divine teachings of the Vedas all over India. Virjananda was a perfect Sanskrita scholar, a master of the difficult science of Pannini's Ashthadhayai, and more than this, a devotee of the Vedas, a sincere theist, a faithful believer in the True God, Brahma, the Supreme Being. He had unswerving faith in the Creator of the universe Whose Existence and Presence he daily felt in his devotions and meditations. But he had his weaknesses also. One of these, and the most unpleasant and irreconcilable to Dayananda, was his daily singing of praises to Goddess Durga. Dayananda told his Guru that it was wrong to worship that Goddess which remark the irate Virjananda did not like and the two fell out, but all was quiet again, and it seems Virjananda did feel the opportuneness of the criticism and gave up his wrong method of devotion. This proves Dayananda's fearlessness and devotion to the Unseen God. He was nearly 40, when he completed his studied.

Dayananda travelled over the major portion of India holding discussions with and silencing opponents, fearlessly criticising other faiths and disseminating Vedic teachings. He was a reformer, a scholar, and a saint, a leader, a critic and a statesman, and a philanthropist, a controversialist and a mystic, who did very useful work during the short span of about ten years-- the last ten years of his short life of fifty-nine summers the major portion of which was spent in hard training and realisation of God.

Dayananda's habit was to lay great stress on moral purity and chastity for men and women which he considered the lowest rungs in the ladder of the true Vedic Brahmacharya. He had himself lived in perfect Vedic Brahmcharya and had enjoyed its bliss. He wanted that all should lead a chaste life. This sort of Brahmacharya, the true ideal of human life called by that name, is taught only in the Vedas and in no other religious book. Though Puranic Hinduism prevailing now in India does acknowledge this ideal, yet the unmoral teachings of the Puranas, and the lewd tales told in them of the turpitude of imaginary heroes and heroines who are openly worshipped in the Puranic temples all over India have eaten into the vitals of Hindu society. The presence in India today of other religious systems which have no true standards of human morality have added to the difficulty, making the path of a reformer of the type of Dayananda extremely unsafe. An unguarded remark from him to a fallen Rajput chief within the hearing of the latter's Muslim bona roba endangered his life. The wretched woman bribed Dayananda's servant to poison the great man which the unfaithful wretched did, and it seems by means of her wealth earned through adultery, she also succeeded in winning over the third rate Muslim doctor detailed to attend upon the patient, the consequence being that a strong body which could not be destroyed by poison several times was now at last laid low by the systematic administration of over-doses of such drugs as Calomel. Dayananda passed his life remembering his God till the very last breath, his senses all in control. The noble soul left the noblest and purest of human body with one long sonorous utterance of "OM" from that holy mouth which had already uttered the truth, praised God and prayed to Him, and had given sane and healthy advice to humanity. Between half past five and six O' clock in the evening, on Tuesday, the thirtieth of October of the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty, (Deepawali night) the great Dayananda called loudly upon His God of the Vedas in Sanskrit and Hindi and glorified and thanked Him for His immense grace all through his earthly career and gave up his ghost as the Biblical phrase goes. In the short life the noble soul had done wonderful work and she was needed elsewhere. Her Divine Father removed her and sent her wherever she was wanted, and if for that purpose He utilised human instruments, his own children need we question His Divine Methods?

Swami Dayananda was not only preaching, holding discussions and establishing institutions and Arya Samajes but was also busy in writing books. Dayananda's name lives and will ever live in the books attributed to his authorship. A man's written word is the image of his thought and wherever it goes, there goes the spirit of the man who expressed the thought garbing in it that particular style of language. Through his thoughts expressed through the medium of language committed to writing a man lives for ever. So the great Dayananda lives among us in his literary, polemical, exegetical and critical works. His whole ideas expressed through Sanskrit and Hindi will ever continue to exert their good influence upon human hearts, prove to be acknowledged to be benevolent and beneficial. Dayananda that preached, lectured, held debates with his opponents and defeated them—that Dayananda is no more amidst us; but the Dayananda who compiled literary works for the instructions of both the sexes, for the rich and the poor, that Dayananda is surely living amongst us and will ever continue to live.

Swami Dayananda wrote and published 21 literary works—Vedanga Parkash being in 17 parts. Prominent among these are:

1. Rig-Vedabhashya. A commentary on the Rig-Veda in Sanskrit and Hindi as far as Mandala VII-Sukta 61, Stanza 2nd. Daya, nanda could not finish this, but two later scholars, Mahamahopadhyaya Pundita Aryamuni and Pundita Shivashankara Sharma, Kavyatirtha, completed the work in a really worthy manner.

2. Yajurvedabhashya. A complete commentary on the Yajur-Veda in Sanskrit and Hindi.
3. Rig-Vedadibhashyabhumika. An exegetical work on Vedic interpretation in Sanskrit and Hindi.
4. Satyarthaprakash. Polemical and controversial chiefly, this work was first published in 1875 with a number of interpolations by mercenary writers and proof-readers.
5. Sanskaravidhi, A devotional and ritualistic work in Hindi and Sanskrit.
6. Aryabhivinaya. A manual of prayers and exhortations based entirely on 108 Vedic texts. Presented now in translation.
7. Panchamahayajnavidhi. A devotional and ritualistic handbook for daily use in Hindi and Sanskrit.

His Aryabhivinaya, Sandhya, and Havana, presented in English translation in the following pages, are intended both for men and women. In these little treatises he has poured out his noble heart and soul. His saintly bearing in life is echoing in each sentence, in each phrase in these manuals. In the Aryabhinaya he has revived the Vedic method of prayer. This work is a novelty in Sanskrit literature, nay in all Hindi literature. The Puranic Hindi had become an utter stranger to the lovely manner of praying to God Unseen with which the majority of Vedic texts are replete. In the Sandhya he simplified and popularised the Yogic methods of meditation and regulation of breath. In the Havana he made the ritual more sensible and rational interpreting it in an intelligent manner. In all these exercises he enjoined the use of the original Sanskrit Vedic texts. He laid down the rule that every Arya, man or woman, must read these texts in the original Sanskrit, and study their interpretations. He also insisted that all should chant the Vedic text correctly with its accentuation. These exercises it must be remembered, were formerly restricted to only a few, the select circle, and were not allowed to be utilised by others. The Puranic Hindu scholars had taken pains to see that these things do not become easily accessible to the general public. To the great loss of the nation they had hidden the Vedas and Sanskrit learning from the people at large.

Dayananda does not excuse women from the performance of these exercises. Every woman has to perform them in Sanskrit. Nothing but illness or sheer weakness of body or mind can excuse her from this duty. So according to Dayananda, the study of the Vedas, of Sanskrit language and literature, and the performance of Yogic, devotional, and ritualistic exercises. are not privileges extended to women-kind, but their inevitable, compulsory daily duty. The failure to perform this daily duty is not excusable.

welfare giving him bliss, that person should be known to be always in union with God and surpassingly happy.

Paraphrase:—That Supreme Being alone is to be attained by a true knowledge of the Vedas Who is the Bestower of bliss free from all stain, Whose desires are fulfilled, Who is contented and is pervasive in the universe. Only that man is participant in the bliss of the possession of God in whose mind has revealed the true knowledge of this Supreme Being, and only he is the happiest of all. Such a man deserves to be congratulated.

विशेषभागीह वृणोति यो हितं नरः परात्मानमतीव
मानतः । अशेषदुःखातु विमुच्य विद्यया स मोक्षयाप्नोति न
कामकामुकः ॥७॥

That person whose soul is infused with righteousness who possesses right knowledge, resorts to the company of the good, thoughtfully regards things, is free from hatred, has controlled his senses, and has recourse to God with exceeding love by means of a right use of perception and other valid means of proof, should be considered to be the most fortunate among mankind. For such a one gets himself released from all unhappiness by knowledge that is true or according to reality, attains final emancipation consisting in the acquisition of God, the Source of Supreme Bliss; and is saved from the ocean of miseries. Whereas one who has not control over his senses but is inordinately attached to their objects is thoughtless, has no true knowledge, no righteousness, does not keep company with the good, is cunning, deceitful, vain, self-willed and otherwise wicked, can never attain the bliss of emancipation being opposed to devotion to God.

Such a wicked person is ever subject to repeated births and deaths, sickness like fever, etc., and is always immersed in the ocean of miseries. Hence it is but right that one should never be opposed to the commands of God, but all should be fully disposed to obey His Law and consequently secure success in their daily routine life as well as assure themselves of final emancipation, for in this lies the fulfilment of human existence.

In this manual of devotional exercises, Aryabhivinaya, principally only one rendering of Vedic texts is given in brief, namely, that which treats of the nature of the Deity, in as much as an attempt at both the interpretations would have increased the bulk of the book. Hence that aspect which concerned the knowledge of worldly affairs has been omitted. But in the exposition of the Vedas, according to the nature of the texts concerned, both the senses—namely that concerning the knowledge of worldly affairs and physical things as well as the nature of the Supreme Being, the soul and their relation—will be given and authorities adduced therefor. For example, तदेवाग्निस्तत् from the Yajurveda ( XXXII,1 ), इन्द्रं मित्रं वरुणम् etc., Rigveda (I,164, 46), बृहस्पतिर्वै ब्रह्म Aitareyabrahmanam (I, 13), also (Shatapathabrahmanam III, 1, 4,15 ), गणपतिर्वै ब्रह्म, प्राणोर्वै ब्रह्म Taittiriyabrahmanam (III,2,8,7), आपो वै ब्रह्म, ब्रह्म ह्यग्निः from the Shatapathabrahmanam (I,5,1,11) महन्तमेवात्मानम् etc., from Yask's Nirukta (VII, 18), according to which only the idea of the true nature of the Supreme Being is upheld, From the texts मुखाद्ग्निरजायत (Yajurveda XXXI, 12) वायोऽग्निं from the Brahmanas, and अग्निरग्रणीर्भवति etc., from the Nirukta of Yaska (VII, 12), is to be understood the physical fire perceived with our eyes through its colour, and by tactile perception through its heat. With these and such other texts of great authority and by means of arguments based upon perception and other valid means proof, both senses of Vedic texts will be upheld in the commentary on the Vedas. This will help us to wash off the blots on the body of Vedic texts smeared by the faulty interpretations proffered by Sayana and other indigenous scholars and their English and other European adherents, and the true sense of the Vedas will be revealed to the student. This will ultimately fetch great gain to mankind and kindle in them a passion for the study of the Vedas by a revelation of the importance of Vedic teachings and of the infinite power of Vedic texts to suggest an unending series of ideas. A study of this treatise is calculated to impart a true knowledge of the nature of God, arouse devotion towards Him, give firmness in righteousness, bring about purification of the daily routine life of the devout and such other results, so that those who give time to it may not succumb to atheism and other heresies. But it is our earnest prayer to God—and He will surely grant it—that all types of people may grow in goodness, and that His grace may shine on all mankind so that everyone may be purged of vice and become perfect.<sup>6</sup>

Oh devotees, सः पूर्व्या निविदा that Almighty God, the Ancient, possessing truthfulness and other attributes, Existed from all eternity. Before the creation of the universe, when nothing else that we see now existed, that Omnipotent Lord, Lustrous with the Light of His Omniscience, cogitated over the setting on foot of this creation, With this idea, कव्यता to regulate creation and to establish the mutual relations in life of human beings and all other creatures, He made the four Vedas<sup>62</sup> embodying the basic principles of all the sciences. आयोः इमाः मनूनाम् प्रजाः अजनयन् He then created the originals from which all these races of man, all these varieties of animals, trees, plants and other existents have come down to us through the age. विवस्वताचक्षसा With His Omnipotent Providence द्याम् अपः च He created the sun, moon and other lustrous entities, illuminated them all, and imparted to man the enlightenment to realise all things by means of his intellectual faculties. It is He that has ordained spheres of special types of happiness to be enjoyed by the fortunate and called in common parlance 'heaven', as well as spheres of special types of miseries for the tribulation of the unfortunate called in popular idiom 'hell'. That God Almighty Whose Nature constitutes true Being, Intelligence and Bliss देवाः द्रविणोदाम् अग्निम् धाम् यन् Him alone, the Bestower of all riches, the Self-Effulgent, do the wise and righteous uphold in their exemplary lives, and He alone, is worthy of being adored by all thoughtful men and women.

ओ३म् । सह नाववतु सह नौ भुनक्तु सह वीर्यं करवावहै ।
तेजस्विनावधीतमस्तु मा विद्वेषावहै ॥ ओ३म् । शान्तिः
शान्तिः शान्तिः ॥ तैत्तिरीयोपनिषद् २।१॥

Oh Most Patient God, नौ सह अत्रु just as Thou art our most gracious Protector, so may we, Thy devotees, readily and ungrudgingly be the protectors of each others's welfare. Give us Thy Grace that we may always glorify and entreat Thee alone, considering only Thee to be our Father, Mother, Brother, King, Master, Helper, Friend, Supreme Preceptor and Bestower of Bliss. May we have the intelligence to realise that there is none equal to Thee or greater than Thou art. By Thy Grace may our daily life be characterised by sincere mutual love and co-operation, spontaneous regard for each other's interests and industry. Give us the heart that we may never be unconcerned at the sight of the sufferings of our brethren that we may rid our country men of all inclinations to heresy and internecine strife, and promote brotherly love.

नौ सह भुनक्तु Oh Lord, Thou, by Thy very Nature, art ever in Thy Most Beatific State in Supreme Bliss, so vouchsafe us to enjoy supreme bliss with Thee. Grant us a foretaste of Thy Supreme Bliss even in our earthly existence that, being in the healthy enjoyment of life we may never, even for a moment, be bereft of it.

सह वीर्यं करवावहै Grant us Thy Grace that we Thy devotees may, by our great hearty cooperation and industrious efforts, acquire a sound knowledge of Thy True Vedic Lore, the possession of which gives supreme power.

नौ अधीतं तेजस्विमस्तु Oh God, Infinite Fount of Divine erudition, by Thy Grace may we attain true and useful education as the result of our efforts to acquire learning and may we be the most learned in the whole world. May we, by our mutual brotherly love, great strength and prowess, enjoy sovereign imperial sway without any interference from anything untoward. Grant us Thy infinite Grace, oh Lord, that everybody amongst us may be a righteous and God-fearing person and that quickly giving up all heresy, falsehood, and belief in teachings opposed to Thy Sacred Vedic Lore, we may be established in the One True Ancient Doctrine embodied in Thy Vedas. so that all heretical, sectarian persuasions, the root of all dissensions and animosities among mankind, may be wiped off from the face of the earth

मा विदूषावहे Oh Master of the universe, expel by Thy Might from amidst us all antipathy, hatred or lack of sympathy, that we may never succumb to these evils, but that, on the contrary, be ever prepared to devote our persons, minds, riches, and learning—our all—for the good and happiness of all.

ओ३म् । शान्तिः शान्तिः शान्तिः Oh Most Merciful and Majestic God, grant us the continual and unabated enjoyment of happiness and continual and sincere adoration of Thee, and realisation of Thy Presence everywhere, by ridding us of the three types of miseries, namely, that dependent on our own selves, our bodies, such as fever or other ailments; that caused by some or other physical object outside of us, such as our human foes, venomous reptiles, wild beasts, like tigers, etc., and thieves, etc., and lastly, that caused by the great natural phenomena, such as our own minds, the senses, the thermic or dynamic force, excessive rainfall, lack of rains, extreme cold, extreme heat, etc.

Oh Divine Teacher of the universe, release me from my bondage to whatever things are perishable, whatever desires are untrue, and establish me in the midst of the imperishable and in a way of life that is laudable,

Oh Divine Source of all that is auspicious in existence, release me from all unhappiness and lead me on to all happiness.

Oh Lord of Progenies, vouchsafe soon upon me, Thy devotee, good 'progeny', worthy sons and daughters, relatives, dependants, etc.. elephants, horses, cows, and other animals, excellent learning, sovereign imperial sway and such other great power and position that would yield me supreme happiness, and enable me to make others happy.

Oh Divine Physician! release me from all bodily ailments and bestow upon me perfect health.

Oh Sovereign Ruler of great kings, release me from the shackles of whatever evil I may have done by thought, word or action, either through ignorance or by mistake, also from the danger of my falling into any such sin in the future, that, being sanctified, I may ever be devoted to Thy Service.

Oh Divine Judge, release me from the shackles of evil passion, evil greed, evil infatuation, fear, worry, indolence, spite, animosity, propensity to err, thirst for sensual objects, cruelty, vanity, propensity to put an evil construction upon things, ignorance and such other blemishes, and establish me firmly in great merits and virtues that are the opposites of these.

Most importunately and humbly do I beg of Thee, Oh Lord, to grant me the wisdom that I may never pin my heart to anything that leads me away from Thee, or sets me against Thy Commandments

Oh Lord of my life, Dear to me as my very life, Father and Protector of my life, Life of my life, Bestower of sovereign imperial sway, Thou art the Lord of my life and my all. I have none but Thee for my succourer, Oh Overlord of kings, just as Thy Kingdom is truthful, just and unassailable, so may our kingdom also be firmly established in truth by Thy Might. Condescend to make us soon the claimants and servants of Thy Divine Kingdom.

Oh Lover of justice, make us also lovers of justice. Oh Overlord of righteousness, keep us firm in righteousness. Oh kind Father of all just as parents take care of their offspring, so do Thou also protect us.

सः परि अगात् The almighty God is pervasive every where like space शुक्रम He is the Fashioner of the whole universe अकायम् He never assumes a body—never incarnates himself. Being entire, infinite, and immutable. He never assumes a body. There is no entity greater [or more pervasive] than [or equal to] God and hence He can never assume a body. अब्रह्मम् God's Being is entire and uniform, indivisible and imperforable and steady and immovable. The piercing or cutting of it being impossible, the relation of a part to the whole does not obtain in it, अस्रविरम् God's "Body" cannot be lashed with nerves, arteries, veins or any such ligatures or fixtures. Being most subtle, God's "Body" cannot be enveloped with anything. शुद्धम् God's Being is ever pure. He is free from the impediments of ignorance, birth and death, joy and sorrow, hunger and thirst, and all other blemishes. An adorer of the pure God surely becomes himself pure, whereas the adorer of an impure being becomes impure. (अपापविद्धम्) God never commits injustice as he is always the Maker of justice [hence He is untouched by sin]. कविः God is the knower of the past, present and future. He is the Wisest, and His knowledge is infinite, the measure of which nobody can take, मनोपी He is the Witness of whatever goes on in the mind of every creature, and He is the Controller of all our intellectual activities. परिभूः His Being completely permeates all space [and overlaps it]. He Shines above all in His Glory स्वयम्भू There is no first cause of His Being. He has no mother, or producer of his Self, but He Himself is the First Cause, the Father, Mother and Producer of all. शाश्वतीभ्यः समाभ्यः अर्थान् यायतभ्यतः व्यद्वात्) That Almighty God has taught His creatures, all mankind, for their great benefit, truth as it ought to be known the truthful Lore of the four Vedas. God, our most compassionate Father, has most graciously set shining the Sun of his Vedic Lore, the dispeller of the darkness of ignorance. God has to be admitted to be the First Cause of everything. So also He has to be acknowledged to be the First Cause of Vedic Lore.

Of His own accord God has graciously taught humanity the principles of true knowledge, for having given us all things [necessary for our life<sup>85</sup>], how could He not confer upon us the gift of true knowledge? God has surely bestowed upon us the most excellent gift of true knowledge, in the form of the four Vedas. There are no books in the world but these which can be said to contain the principles of true knowledge revealed by God. Just as God is the wisest and most just, so are the Vedas also. No other book or books can be said to embody the principles of true knowledge revealed by God like the Vedas, or to be equal to or greater [more profound<sup>85</sup>] than these. [For more light on this topic please refer to the "Satyarthaprakas.a", another treatise written by<sup>86</sup> me].

(इते) Oh Almighty God, possessing infinite strength and prowess, Annihilator of our habitual concupiscence<sup>87</sup> in our daily life, do not let me any longer continue to adopt that miserable attitude in life which is destructive to the possession of such great virtues as right knowledge, etc., but lift my soul, mind, senses,—all my being—up from the pitfall of these sins and permanently establish me firmly, by Thy Grace, in the possession of the most valuable assets, namely, right knowledge, truthfulness, righteousness, and such other merits. माइँह Oh Most Majestic God, vouchsafe me righteousness, power and riches fulfilment of great aspirations, and foretaste of final emancipation in this very life, wisdom and right knowledge that I may make the greatest progress in spiritual advancement. सर्वाणि भूतानि Oh Friend of all, Oh God immanent in all beings, may all living beings समीक्षन्ताम् look मा at me चक्षुषा with the eye मित्रस्या of a friend. May no body deal injustice to anybody. This great law of righteousness has been laid down by God for all mankind. Only this is fit to be adopted in life by all.

तत एव अग्निः The 'Self-Effulgent'<sup>88</sup> is the Name of God, the Efficient Cause of the whole universe. The word 'agni' अग्निः means, 'the most excellent', 'having right knowledge for the very essence, deserving or 'fit to be known', 'most worthy of being attained by the very nature', 'the most adorable,' etc. तत् आदित्यः God is called 'Indestructible' and 'Lustrous,' because He is not subject to destruction and is lustrous by His own Nature<sup>89</sup>. तत् वायुः God is called 'Dynamis', because He is the Supporter of the whole universe, of infinite strength and dearer to us than our very life<sup>90</sup> उत चन्द्रमाः God is called 'Bliss-Imparter, because He is Bliss by his very nature and imparts supreme bliss to his<sup>91</sup> devotees. तत एव शुक्रम That Supreme Being Whose Nature itself is Luster is the Maker of the whole universe<sup>92</sup> तत ब्रह्म That Supreme Being is Infinite Intelligence, the Greatest of all, and the great Promoter of the good of his righteous devotees by the bestowal of bliss, wisdom and other<sup>93</sup> boons. ताः आपः Being omniscient, intelligent and all-pervasive, God is called 'Omnipresent<sup>94</sup>'. सः प्रजापतिः He alone is the Master and Protector of the whole universe and none else can discharge this function<sup>94</sup> Only Him, and none else, shall we regard as the Fulfiller of all our desires and our Protector.

ऋचम् Oh Most Merciful God, grant me the grace that through a sincere and serious study of the principles laid down in the Rig-Veda, (accompanied by experiment, observation and practical application of them to my own daily life <sup>95</sup> ) प्रपद्ये I may become a perfect knower of वाचम् Vedic Lore and a faultless exponent of it to my brethren. मे May my मनः mind प्रपद्ये become cultured and broadened by cogitating over the real import of यजुः the texts of the Yajur-Veda and the theories and opinions <sup>96</sup> they give rise to. प्रपद्ये In the same manner may I attain प्राणम् the equilibrium of my <sup>95</sup> mind, senses and vitality through meditation leading to साम the determination <sup>97</sup> of the sense of the texts of the Sama-Veda. प्रपद्ये May I also attain चक्षुः perfect health and utility of my senses of

सहौजः May I, by Thy Grace, always have firmness, health and other qualities that strengthen the body and render it serviceable. प्राणापानौमयि Oh Lord God, Supporter of the life of all mankind, by Thy Grace, may both my superior<sup>99</sup> vital force the cause of inhalation, exhalation and such other functions of the upper body, and the inferior vital force that causes evacuations, perspiration, etc., be conducive to the cleansing of the senses, of the humours of the system, bringing about perfect health, strength, nourishment, smooth working of the whole body, and the safeguarding of the vitals. Attaining such a perfectly healthy state of the body, may I be ever happy and fully devoted to the observance of Thy Commandments in my daily life, the practice of Thy presence and Thy adoration.

सः नः बन्धुः That Almighty God is the Assuager of our grief, and our Helper in need like a sincere kinsman. जनिता He is our Protector and also of the universe, like the father who begets and protects his offspring. स विधाता He alone is the Maker of the whole universe and the Bestower upon us of achievement in our undertakings. विश्वाधामानि भुवनानि वेद By His Infinite Omnipotence He creates and supports the various planetary worlds. Thus rendered free from all fear and obstacles, we may live and move happily in Thy great Kingdom—the world—ourselves enjoying, by Thy Grace, sovereign imperial sway and the highest bliss in Thee and be ever devoted to Thee.

अहम् एतम् वेद I, his righteous devotee, know this Perfect <sup>103</sup> God whose Universal Body possesses millions and millions of heads, etc. It is the duty of every man and woman to try to know and realise that God, never forget Him, and never to take anybody or any thing as God in His Place. What sort of God is He? महान्तम् He is Greater than the greatest, there being nobody equal to Him or greater than He is. आदित्यवर्णम् Not only He is the Maker of the sun and other celestial bodies, but He Himself is Lustrous by His own Nature. तमसः परस्तात् Nay, He is untouched by the darkness of ignorance and such other blemishes, and He also quickly safeguards His righteous and truth-loving devotees from all such shortcomings. तम् एव गिदृश It is the considered opinion of the learned and the wise that without His Grace and without right knowledge about Him no human being can ever hope to attain true bliss. मृत्युम् अति एति Only by knowing Him can a human being overcome death and not otherwise. अयनाय अन्यः पन्था न विद्यते For there is no other way to the attainment of final emancipation than the correct knowledge of the Being of, and devotion to God. God firmly ordains that everybody should proceed only by this Way. Hence it is the duty of every man and woman to adopt only this course giving up all heresies and worldly botherations.

Translation:—Only an enlightened person can, after studying the eternal Vedic Law (and living up to it), realise by a sincere endeavour from his heart and soul that Supreme Being Who encompasses all the creatures and all the worlds pervades all the quarters of the universe and is immanent in the very essence of truth (in thought, word and deed).

Paraphrase —परीत्य The Almighty God completely pervades and encompasses the whole universe, भूतानि the primordial matter and all the great elements including space and the earth. लोकान् He pervades the whole world, सर्वाः दिशाः He is in the east and the other principal quarters, प्रदिशाः the north-east and the other subordinate quarters, He is above, below and all round us and not an atom of matter can be said to be without being permeated by Him प्रथमं ज्ञानम् By living beings produced first, we should understand the whole world. These embodied beings and others (i. e., transmigrating souls who may be without gross bodies) have with all the power of their souls to practise truthfulness in their embodied existence, acquire true knowledge, have faith in God, and practise devotion to Him as He Exists in His true Nature. उपस्थाय Thus realising Him as He is, the devotee feels his Presence, अभि संविवेश sees Him face to face, so to say and, entering into the Being of That God Who is the Highest Bliss by His very Nature; gets rid of all miseries and always remains in the enjoyment of the Supreme Bliss of the Company of the Supreme Being.

भग प्रणेतर्भग सत्यगधो भगेमां धियमुदवा ददन्नः ।

भग Oh Almighty God, Possessor of all good fortune, Thou art the Bestower of good fortune on Thy devctees, both in mundane and supra-mundane spheres. भग प्रणेतः All power and riches it is in Thy Power to bestow, and none else's. Thou givest riches to anyone as Thou likest. So be gracious to dispel our poverty and to grant us great power and wealth, for Thou alone impellest all to the attainment of riches. भग सत्यराधः Oh God, Possessor of all good fortune, Master of true riches, Thou art the Accomplisher of all our endeavours for the acquisition of riches and power. Please, always grant us riches. Of that great Wealth called final Beatitute, Thou alone art the Donor and none else is भग इमां धियं ददन Oh Possessor of true good fortune, grant us abundance of wealth and power a surpassingly excellent understanding, so that we may have the ability rightly to realise Thy Attributes, to understand how to obey Thy Commandments, and to have a true grasp of Thy Divine Nature. Give us right understanding, make us do only right deeds and endow us with only true virtues, so that we may be able to understand even the subtlest things in Thy Creation in the right manner. भग प्रजनय नः Oh Producer of all riches, be gracious to create for us ample of wealth of all sorts. गोभिः अश्वैः नृभि नृवन्तः स्वाम Bestow upon us the best riches consisting of good cows, horses, and other animals, and good men and women. Oh Almighty God, by Thy Grace, may we always have among our offspring, relatives, friends, dependants and servants, worthy men and women. What more, we beseech Thee that there may be no fools or wicked people born among us, so that our good repute may spread far and wide and that there may be no cause for anybody to censure us.

तदेजति तन्नैजति तद्दूरे तद्वन्तिक ।

तदन्तरम्य सर्वस्य तदु सर्वस्यास्य बाह्यतः ॥४०१॥

12

तत् एजति That Supreme Being takes every creature round in its allotted course in the settled scheme in this moving world. Hence the ignorant erroneously attribute motion to Him also, without realising that He, being perfectly Immanent in every being, cannot be Himself put in motion. तत् न एजति Hence it ought to be evident that the Supreme Being does never move, but He is Immanent everywhere and in everything, in a uniform and immovable manner. The wise understand God's Nature only thus. तत् दूरे The Supreme Being is very far away from people whose life is soiled with such blemishes as unrighteousness, ignorance, thoughtlessness, lack of regulation of the senses and of devotion to God. They cannot realise Him even after millions and millions of years of embodied existences, but keep on wallowing hither and thither in this ocean of repeated births and deaths and other miseries. उ तत् अन्तिके He is extremely near to those who are truth-speakers, doers of what is right, regards of the truth, who have subdued their senses, and are inclined to work for the good of all. उ तत् अस्य सर्वस्य बाह्यतः Nay, He is Immanent in the souls of all and is everywhere in His Perfect Being. He is therefore the Soul of the soul, for God is everywhere, outside, inside, and in the middle of the world, and not even a grain of sesame is void of His Immanence. He is permeating everything in His Entirety in a uniform manner. Only by knowing Him can one attain final Beatitude and not otherwise.

Translation:—My life vitality, sight, hearing, speech, mind, soul, may each of these, through our unity and solidarity, be conducive to the welfare of all.

May the man learned in the four Vedas be able to lead us through our unity and solidarity.

May the lustre of true knowledge, the hope of final emancipation, our strength to bear the brunt of society, and our good works—each of these, through our unity and solidarity, tend to the good of all.

May our adherence to the scientific truths expounded in the Atharva-Veda, the rules of action laid down in the Yajur-Veda, the Universal principles propounded in the Rig-Veda, and the Brihat and Rathantara Hymns and the rules of spiritual discipline leading to the equilibrium of the senses and passion laid down in the Samaveda—may all these, through our unity and solidarity, be conducive to the welfare of all.

Oh ye elite, may we, entering into the feelings of each other through sincere sympathy, be good followers of our Great Leader through our life, God Almighty, free from the fear of premature death and decrepitude, and attain final emancipation even in our earthly life itself.

Paraphrase:—यज्ञेन यज्ञः कल्पतम् (Considering that Most August Supreme Being to be the raison d'être of one's actions, every man and woman should offer up to Him, and for Him, his or her all This is the advice and prayer embodied in this text.

Oh Almighty God, Thy Commandment is that we all should offer up to Thee all things belonging to us. आयुः Hence our life, प्राणः vitality, चक्षुः sight, श्रोत्रम् hearing, वाक् speech, मनः mind, आत्मा soul, ब्रह्मा the erudition in Vedic lore we acquire from a preceptor well versed in the four Vedas as well as our men and women learned in the Vedas, ज्योतिः the light and heat we obtain from the sun and fire, स्वर् our means of happiness, पृष्ठम् our place—whatever gives us shelter and firmness on the earth and elsewhere as well as our endeavours towards the realisation of the four-fold ideal of your life, यज्ञः whatever good we do स्तोमः the praises we offer Thee, ऋक् च यजुः च साम च अथर्व च our Yajur-Veda, Rig-Veda, Sama-Veda and Atharva-Veda, बृहत् च रथन्तरं च the great Rathantara Chant, we offer up to Thee. We are only Thy devotees who have taken refuge with Thee. Please dispose of us as Thou Willest. प्रजापतेः प्रजाः अभूय Thy Children we are, म्वर अगन्म vouchsafe us the highest bliss. Grant us the happiness of sovereign imperial sway as long as we live in this world, and bestow happiness upon us even after we depart this life. देवाः अमृताः अभूम Oh great God Immortal, may we, by Thy Grace, become perfectly learned, attain final emancipation by realising Thee and always enjoy (till the end of the great night of dissolution) the supreme bliss of final Beatitude with our whole<sup>106</sup> being. वेद् म्वाहा Vouchsafe that we may ever busy ourselves in the observance of thy Commandments and in the endeavours to realise Thee. Thou art Immanent in our hearts. Teach us that we may speak and do only what Thou directest us to do through our consciences, and never to contradict Thy Guidance. Oh Ocean of Grace, direct Thou our life's affairs that we may be happy and victorious wherever we be and whatever good we may do.

यस्मात् अन्यः परः जातः न अस्ति Call that Being God greater than Whom or equal to Whom there has never been nor shall ever be hereafter. यः विश्वा भवनानि आर्विवेश Who enters and completely pervades, all the places of habitation of creatures all the worlds, He Himself is the Lord of all creatures. प्रजापतिः प्रजया सं रराणः He is making all the creatures sport in His creation through the Supervision of His Divine Providence and 'He is Sporting with them by imparting His Protection and Guidance. त्रीण्ज्योतीँषिसचते He has created the three great principles of thermic energy, namely, the sun, electricity and fire, the three principal means for the discovery of all physical sciences and arts.
सःषोडशी He is called the Lord of the sixteen digits, for He has created the sixteen. They are: i. ईक्ष्णु deliberation; ii. प्राण vitality; iii. श्रद्धा faith; iv. आकाश ether and space; v वायु dynamic energy, air; vi अग्नि fire; vii जल water; viii. पृथिवी earth; ix. इन्द्रिय the senses; x. मनस् mind; xi. अन्न victuals; xii. वीर्य prowess; xiii. तपस् observance of the law of righteousness; xiv. मन्त्र Divine Counsel (the Vedic Lore); xv. कर्म effort, motion; xvi. नाम the different spheres of existence and the names of things obtaining in them. Within these sixteen digits the whole universe is exhausted, but in God they are infinite. That man or woman who, forgetting That God, adores any other finite or imaginary being can never be happy, but must always be miserable and wretched.

 every country, that falls into the sin of forgetting this Almighty God and takes to the adoration of any other being in His place necessarily suffers untold miseries, which is evident to all. Oh ye people, take heed therefore, and if ye wish to be happy, adore with truthfulness, in

Oh Lord God Almighty, Thy Nature, Attributes and Deeds form the subject matter of the Vedas, philosophical and other scientific treatises, (all religious books and all systems of science and thought). अमृतम् Thou art Immortal, धाम the Abode of the emancipated souls and the Protector and Sustainer of all, गुहा विभृतं सत् the Witness of the workings of the mind and the Seer of even the most hidden actions of man, immanent in the cavity of the heart of all. नु Now विद्वान् he who knows तत् Thee of this description, प्रवोचेत् and sincerely teaches the general public about Thee, गन्धर्वः both by practice and precept, upholding Thee in his heart as well as his actions, is deservedly called the Upholder<sup>111</sup> of the Supreme Being. त्रीणि पदानि Oh God, there are three spheres of the Dispensation of the Divine Providence, namely, (1) the creation of the multifarious universe after dissolution, (2) sustenance of the created universe continuing to exist, and (3) dissolution of the whole universe after its continuance for one thousand quarters of creational cycles reducing the various created composite beings to the primordial atomic form to be maintained during an equal period of time of darkness, called the night of dissolution<sup>112</sup>. सः He यः who वेद knows तानि these three ways of the working of the Providence, निहिता as laid गुहा अस्य in the innermost recesses of his heart (since Thou are there—by meditating on them at least at the morning and evening prayer-time) पितुः पिता असत् is surely to be respected even by the elderly and learned, as father is respected by children, for he is the most learned even among those who are profoundly learned otherwise.

is excellent in every way. Save us from indigestion that we may suffer no ills arising therefrom, and grant also that we may never suffer for lack of food. Oh Source of Supreme Strength, पिन्वस्व strengthen us ऊर्जे that we may do deeds of great prowess. Oh Origin of the Vedic Lore, पिन्वस्व graciously equip us always with the requisite clarity of understanding and other<sup>116</sup> qualifications, ब्रह्मणे that we may rightly grasp Thy Vedic Teachings and propagate them in the true spirit. Oh Supreme Being, Greatest King among all rulers, पिन्वस्व stimulate us with appropriate courage, fortitude, moral goodness, courtesy, prowess, strength of body and mind and such other virtues क्षत्राय that we may be independent and enjoy sovereign imperial sway. May no foreigners come to our country to rule over us, and may we never lose<sup>117</sup> our political independence and become enslaved to foreigners. Oh Lord of heavens and earth, पिन्वस्व vouchsafe us the ability द्यावापृथिवीभ्याम् both to earn and enjoy legitimate worldly happiness, and to have a foretaste of the supreme bliss of final emancipation in this earthly life itself. सुवर्म Oh Most Righteous God, असि Thou art धर्म the Maker of righteousness, and Righteousness Itself by Thy Nature. Be gracious to make us also righteous like Thyself. अमेनि Thou art bereft of animosity. Make us also free from animosity like Thyself. धारय Oh Lord, graciously bestow अस्मे upon us नृम्णानि abundance of riches consisting of good and useful knowledge diligence and other virtues, elephants, horses, cows, and other cattle and animals, gold, silver, and other metals, diamonds and other precious stones, independence in our own country, freedom to visit other countries and efficiency to manage our own country's political administration, men and women of excellence for our offspring, relatives, friends, dependants, servants and neighbours, so that we may never suffer for lack of anything. Oh Master of all, धारय be pleased to provide for our body-politic men and women distinguished with ब्रह्म perfect learning and other<sup>118</sup> such virtues, क्षत्रम् good education, training in the use of war weapons and in the administration of the country, विशम् education of a general nature training in industries, clear intellect and cool head in business, wealth and means of life with perfect diligence to acquire and hoard them for the welfare of the general public, sufficient education of a general nature. good health and corporal strength readiness to do the humblest sort of work for the upkeep of society—readiness to serve others, all infused with the love of their country and prepared to die for it—may there never be lack of such in our society, kingdom, nation, country Do Thou Thyself produce and support all these for us, so that by Thy Grace our prosperity may ever continue unimpaired.

किञ्चिद्विद्वत्सीदधिष्ठानमारम्भणं कतमस्त्विक्तथासीत् ।

This text contains a dialogue. किञ्चित् What आसीत् is अधिष्ठानम् the support of this world? कतमत् What is आरम्भणम् its cause and who is its maker? कथा In what manner आसीत् is it the cause of this world, and in what manner is he the author of it? What is the support of God Who creates it? What is efficient cause or means with which the world is made and with which God has made it? The following are the answers to these questions. यतः Of Whom this world is the work, विश्वकर्मा that Almighty God, the Maker of the universe, महिना has fashioned it out of His own Infinite Omnipotence. He Himself is the support of this world, its efficient cause and the means of its making and all. जनयन् Producing the world containing living beings and all out of His Infinite Omnipotence—द्याम् from the heavens भूमिम् down to the earth in the proper manner - वि अर्णोत् He keeps the whole overshadowed by His Divine Providence. God's support, efficient cause and instrument, is He Himself and nothing else. He creates, protects and supports all, and is All-bliss. What else can we say of Him? विश्ववक्षाः Well He is the Seer of the universe. How can any man or woman who, forgetting this Almighty God, takes refuge with some finite or imaginary being escape from getting drowned in the sea of miseries?

अग्ने Oh Effulgent God, असि Thou art तनूपाः the Protector of our corporal life. पाहि Be gracious to protect मे my तन्वम् body. अग्ने Oh Effulgent God, Almighty Physician, असि Thou art आयुर्दाः the Donor and Advancer of our earthly existence. देहि Please give मे me आयुः to live in the worthiest manner the full span of life attended with all happiness अग्ने Oh God, Effulgent with Infinite Lustre of Divine Wisdom, असि Thou art वर्चोदाः the Giver of the lustre of wisdom—true knowledge. देहि Please give मे me वर्चः the most excellent light of true knowledge. अग्ने Oh Effulgent God affording us protection of body etc. in this manner, keep us always happy, and यत् whatever ऊनम् deficiency मे तन्वाः there may be in my body आपृण do Thou supply तत् that मे for me. May there be no lack of joy or of anything of excellence for us. Oh God, it would redound to Thy Glory only when we Thy sons live in great happiness. When little children desire to have something big or small which can make them rejoice, or when they wish to derive pleasure in some other way, to whom else can they go but to their father or mother? Thou art Our Almighty Father, of all donors the Most Competent to give us riches and wealth. Hence we come to Thee, for to no one else can we go.

 विश्वतस्पात्। सं बाहुभ्यां धमति सं पतत्रैर्द्यावाभूमी
 जनयन्देवऽ एकः ॥१७॥१६॥ 34

विश्वतश्चक्षुः His Eyes are over the whole world—there is nothing invisible to Him. उत In the same manner विश्वतोमुखः His Mouth is everywhere, विश्वतोबाहुः His Arms are everywhere, विश्वतस्पात् His Feet everywhere, and His Ears and other Senses and Organs also are everywhere— all over the world, that is, He is the Seer, Speaker, Supporter of all and He, the Almighty God, is Omnipresent (and Omnipotent). Only that man or woman who fears and reveres Him will live a righteous life and none else. देवः That Almighty God, the Maker of the universe is एकः One without a second, जनयन् creating the whole world द्यावाभूमी from the heavens down to the earth. The Just and Merciful God, the Father of the universe, समु धमति makes every disembodied soul to be born again and every embodied soul to die as it may be fitting in each case, giving all souls without partiality बाहुभ्याम् and by means of His two Arms of infinite strength and prowess, पतत्रैः fully to enjoy the happiness or misery that falls to the lot of each strictly in accordance with the good or evil deeds done by each in his or her past life. No man or woman should have any faith in any but that Formless, Unborn, Infinite, All-powerful, Just and Merciful God. Only He is Our Most Desired Deity, Worthy of being entreated and adored. Only from Him shall we secure bliss and from no one else.

Oh Almighty God, Author of all that is auspicious, भूः Thou art ever Existent, भुवः Thou art the Maker of the universal dynamic energy, and other natural forces and phenomena, स्वर् and the Creator of those spheres of existence in which happiness superabounds. We beseech Thee, give us the happiness of all the three<sup>119</sup> spheres of existence. This text embodies a dialogue. A carpenter gets wood of trees from the forest, shapes it, and by various means and methods manufactures out of it different articles of furniture किञ्चित् Now where is वनम् the forest, उ and कः what आस is वृक्षः the tree यतः from which the Almighty Carpenter .has hewn out द्यावापृथिवी this heaven and earth and other worlds? निष्टतद्गुः The Almighty God has fashioned this earth, the middling sphere of existence in which happiness and unhappiness are allowed together, the heaven,—so called in common parlance—a sphere of existence superabounding with happiness allotted to embodied souls as a result of their past actions, and hell,—also a popular epithet—that last and lowest sphere of existence in which there is unalloyed misery for the castigation of those embodied souls the fruit of whose evil actions has now to be enjoyed by them. from the primordial atomic matter, and this therefore is the forest as well as the tree—the material cause—from which the multifarious universe is created. मनीषिणः Oh learned men, इत् indeed मनसा you should, with a sincere mind पृच्छत् enquire उ and try to know decisively तत् about That Supreme Being यत् who, having created भुवनानि the worlds, धारयन् supervises and supports all of them. Only by knowing and realising Him can human beings attain felicity and not otherwise<sup>121</sup>.

विश्वकर्मन् Oh Almighty God, Ordainer and Maker of all शिव condescend to teach us all about इमा those धामानि spheres of existence या which परमाणि are the highest, मध्यमा middling, and अत्रमा the lowest friend tells his friend even the most secret things about him. Thus coming to possess right knowledge, हर्षिषि we shall become proficient in our daily transactions with others concerning these spheres of existence. स्वधावः Oh Thou matters regarding the honouring the learned, providing conveniences and means of happiness to the righteous, and the imparting of useful knowledge and other good things to the deserving. We beseech Thee, Oh God, grant us generously, of Thy own accord, all things that would fetch us happiness, for we, of ourselves, are altogether powerless to satisfy Thee in any way. We cannot at all conduct ourselves in a manner conformable to Thy Divine Commandments, but as Thou art the Saviour of the fallen and lowly, we fully hope that Thou wilt cast Thy 'Glance' of Mercy on us and make us happy.

Oh Almighty God, Rectifier of all disorders, यत् whatever छिद्रम् loophole in the form of the weakness, inordinate attraction of our repulsiou from its object, fickleness, obtuseness and such other blemishes, मे of my चक्षुषः sight, हृदयस्य heart (vital energy, soul). मनसः mind (reasoning, and discriminative faculties, and memory and all the senses and limbs

For Thou art बृहस्पति the Master of all great beings, Oh Lord, and having regard to Thy own greatness Thou wilt surely accomplish this great thing, so that we all may devote ourselves entirely to Thy adoration and the observation of Thy Commandments. So condescend to close all my loopholes Thyself. We repeatedly entreat Thee, यः Who पतिः art the Master भुवनस्य of the whole universe, that Thou mayest cast a glance of mercy upon us नः so that all the days of our life भवतु may be शम् peaceful and happy. Oh Omniscient God, Creator of all, विश्वकर्मा Thou art He Whose work the vast multifarious universe is विमना and Whose infinite Mind is replete with infinitely varied knowledge. आत् विहायाः Who is All-pervasive like space and the immutable and imperturbable Support of all. विधाता He is the Maker and Differentiator of each individual of every species in the vast universe धाता and the Sustainer of them all. उत्परमः Though being the Greatest of all beings सन्दक् He is the Overseer of the good or evil deeds of all, Who takes careful note of each little thing concerning every individual. तेषाम None but those men and women who have faith in This Almighty God are devoted to Him and adore Him, and who do not in the least offer divine worship to any other being enjoy इष्टानि all the happiness they desire. The Almighty God keeps His devotees happy, सम् मर्दन्ति and those who are devoted to Him ever fully enjoy इषा to their heart's content the supreme bliss of union with Him and never succumb to any misery. आहुः The learned should teach that एकम् the Almighty God is One without a second. यत्र That Supreme Being in Whose Omnipotent Providence सप्त ऋषीन् the seven forces that energise all beings in the universe, namely, the five vital energies, the mind and the soul, remain in the 'causal' state at the time of the dissolution of the creation, परे Himself continues in His Most Beatific Blissful state at the time of creation of the universe, during the continuance of it, as well as its dissolution in the end. Only by adoring Him can we hope to be always happy.

Oh Divine Physician, Exterminator of all our ills, चतुःशक्तिः may the human body with its four stages of life, नाभिः a bundle of nerves, veins, arteries, muscles, and glands ऋतस्य through which course nervine energy, lymph, blood and other matter to energise it,—the abode of health if taken proper care of through right knowledge of its inner working, become for us सप्रथाः a vast field of happiness by Thy Grace. सः So विश्वायुः may the period of the life of every being in the universe सप्रथाः expand to its fullest extent नः for us by Thy Grace. Thou art Infinitely Great by Thy Omnipotence, so सप्रथाः expand सर्वायुः our life entirely with the full quota of happiness नः falling to our share by Thy Dispensation. Oh Thou Whose Nature is Peace, अप rid us of द्वेषः all animosity, अप rid us of ह्वरः all perturbation. Grant us Thy Grace that we may never pay the least Divine honour to any but Thee, and also pay no heed to anything contrary to Thy Commandments. This is our solemn vow, अन्यत्रतस्य and anything against this we will not consider worth our while, सश्रिम but we will always adore Thee and Thee alone. This is our firm resolve, vouchsafe us the strength to keep it.

यो नः पिता जनिता यो विधाता धामानि वेद भुवनानि विश्वा । यो देवानां नामधाऽएकऽएव तं सम्प्रभं भुवना यन्त्यन्या ॥ १७ । १७ ॥

Oh ye devotees. यः He Who is नः our पिता Father, that is, Who always protects us, जनिता Our Parent, that is, Who produces or creates us, विधाता Our Dispenser, that is, Who accomplishes the allotment of the supreme bliss of final emancipation and earthly happiness according to the deserts of each one of us, वेद He Who knows each one विश्वा of all भुवनानि the worlds—spheres of existence—धाम with the position and place of each, and He Who also Personally abides in each individual being, and नामध्यः He Who is the Assigner of the name, place and function देवानाम् of the sun and other celestial bodies एकः is the One Supreme Being एव alone, and none else. We must not have any doubt that He is our Master and Father. अन्या All other भुवना beings, all the Vedas, philosophical and scientific systems, and all learned men, यन्ति proceed fully सम्प्रभम् to enquire तम् about Him alone. For, the end of human life is the attainment of true and decisive knowledge of God, His nature, attribute and deeds, of the universe created by Him and of His Commandments. The four ideals of human life, namely, the practice of righteousness, the acquisition of wealth and means of life by legitimate ways, and the attainment of final emancipation can be accomplished only through Him. Hence every devotee should dedicate to Him his or her body, mind, soul, and all that he or she has, and spare no pains in achieving these ends with the help of God.

यज्जाग्रतो दूरमुदैति दैवं तदु सुप्तस्य तथैवेति ।
 दूरङ्गमं ज्योतिषां ज्योतिरेकं तन्मे मनः शिवसङ्कल्प-मस्तु ॥ ३४ । १ ॥

Oh Almighty God Who removest all obstacles from our way of practising righteousness तन् may that मनः mind मे of mine, which is a gift from Thee, अस्तु be by Thy Grace, always शिवसङ्कल्पम् the receptacle of righteous and auspicious resolves, and never of anything, that is contrary to righteousness. Let me ponder over the nature of this great instrument Thou hast given me. जाग्रतः In man's waking state तथाएव as well as, surely सुप्तस्य while he is sleeping, उ his mind उत्प्रेति flies दूरम् farther and farther, दूरङ्गमम् it is its nature to wander far. ज्योतिः It is the illuminator ज्योतिषाम् even of fire, the sun and other lustrous planets; the ears and other senses, which are themselves the illuminators of other objects. Without it man can receive no enlightenment on any subject. एकम् It is unique and great, but fickle, extremely fleet but uncontrollable. Oh Lord, only by Thy Grace can it become firm, pure, righteous and replete with true knowledge. तत् This great and incomparable instrument Thou hast bestowed upon us to know the past, present and future by, is entirely in Thy control, (for we cannot subdue such a powerful thing). Please condescend to subject it to our control so that we may never go wrong in our life's transactions and fall in sin, but may always live righteously, attain true knowledge, and be ever devoted to Thee.

न तं विदाथ य इमा जजानान्यद्युष्माकमन्तरं
बभूव । नीहारेण प्रावृता जल्प्या चासुतृप उक्थशा- सश्चरान्त ॥ १७ । ३१ ॥

44

Oh ye people at large, most of you न do not विदाथ know तम् Him यः Who जजान has produced इमा all these worlds—these beings we see—the Almighty God Whose work this universe is. Hence it is that प्रावृताः being enveloped नीहारेण with the mist of ignorance जल्प्यः you vociferate your false and atheistic opinions, which conduct will fetch you only misery and not happiness. असुतृपः You are over head and ears in the avocation of satisfying the selfish cravings of your animal life. उक्थशासः Only for the enjoyment of sensual pleasures you are perpetrating deeds quite opposite to Vedic teachings, चरन्ति conducting yourselves in a manner altogether in contravention of the Commandments of the Almighty and Just God, the Supreme Being Who has created all these worlds, these beings, including ourselves. Hence, surely, you do not know Him.

Are not the souls and the Supreme Being identical? अन्यत् युष्माक अन्तरं बभूव Neither by reason nor according to the teachings of the Vedas can the identity of the souls and the Supreme Being be established for they are already acknowledged to be different. The soul is beset with ignorance and such other blemishes, whereas the Supreme is not. Hence the souls and the Supreme Being can never be identical now. They were never identical in the past nor will they ever be in the future. However, between the souls and the Supreme Being there exists the relation of the pervaded and the Pervader, the supported and the Supporter, the Server and the served, the produced and the Producer, etc. It is not reasonable for any man or woman to consider the souls and the Supreme Being to be one and the same.

Oh Master of all, Supreme Ruler of great kings, भगः by Thy Nature Thou art Supreme Power, hence Thou art Majestic. देवाः Oh ye learned and wise, तेन एव only through that Majestic and Almighty God propitiated by our efforts, वयम् can we स्याम hope to become भगवन्तः possessors of supreme power. भग Oh Majestic God, सर्वेऽइत the whole world जोहवीत is extremely desirous to realise त्वा Thee तम् of this description, for what unfortunate man can there be who does not like to have access to Thee? भग Oh Majestic God भव mayest Thou be पुरः एता accessible to us even before we are aware of it, and once having attained Thee, may we never again lose Thee or the supreme power bestowed upon us by Thee. इह Mayest Thou grant us of Thy own accord in this very life supreme power (including the bliss of final emancipation), for, in the next embodied existence, if there must be such any more, we shall have fruits to enjoy appropriate to it. Anyhow, if such be Thy Will, vouchsafe that we may be ever devoted to Thee.

Oh Lord of hosts. गणानाम् Thou art the Master of my hosts,—all the associations of men I am concerned with, and therefore हवामहे we call त्वा Thee गणपतिम् the Lord of hosts. प्रियाणाम् As Thou art the Protector of all the dear ones who work for us and the things that are dear to us, हवामहे we call त्वा Thee प्रियपतिम् the Protector of all that is dear to us निधीनाम् As Thou art the Keeper of all our dear treasures, हवामहे we call त्वा Thee निधिपतिम् the Custodian of our treasures. वसो Oh Dispenser of all that we need in life गर्भधम् I know that Thou art Sustainer and Nourisher of that Primordial Energy from which, as the child from the womb of the mother, is produced this whole universe. That Womb of Thine, the Source of all, is Thy Omnipotence, the Supporter and Protector of the whole world. This world composed of animate creatures and other beings comes into and goes out of its composite existence frequently, आ but असि Thou art अजः ever Unborn and Immortal, by Thy very Nature. अहम् May I अजानि fling afar from me, by Thy Grace, मम all my unrighteousness, ignorance and evil inclinations, गर्भधम् the source of all our miseries. हवामहे All of us Thy devotees vie with each other in our efforts to attain Thee. So be Thou soon accessible to us now, for we cannot brook delay. Wert Thou to delay now even in the least in allowing us to realise Thee, it is certain, we shall never realise Thee. (Hence, Oh Lord, have mercy on us and allow us to attain Thee, Thyself preparing us therefor.)

such virtues, and having once received them with great love and earnestness, may I ever be industrious to develop them and utilise them only for the benefit of the world at large, and for the good administration of our realm.

THE SANDHYA

Author's Preface

' This book treats of the compulsory daily devotional exercises of the Aryas. It describes Vedic sacrifice. The texts of the Vedas used in such a sacrifice are given in this treatise with their full explanations which should be carefully studied and all actions enjoined in the performance of the sacrifice should be faithfully executed. The exercitant, should adopt measures for the purification of his or her soul and mind and to cleanse the body, then betake to some quiet, secluded place, compose his or her whole self and then faithfully go through each step laid down in the procedure. The immediate fruit of the regular performance of these duties is the advancement of the soul through the attainment of useful and true knowledge, and success in one's mundane as well as supramundane affairs through the acquisition of bodily health. Ultimately the exercitant is led on to the attainment of the ability and inclination to follow the law of righteousness in his or her daily life, the acquisition of the wherewithal of life by all just means the fulfilment of his or her noble aspirations and the achievement of final emancipation in 'this' very life Every man and woman should enjoy true bliss by attaining these objects.

Authorities enjoining the performance of the twilight meditation and the sacrifice of burnt offerings:

सायंसायं गृहपतिर्नोऽअग्निः प्रातः प्रातः सौमन-
सस्य दाता । वसोर्वसोर्ऽसुदानऽ एधि वयं त्वेन्धाना
स्तनं पुषेम ॥ AV. XIX, 55, 3.

This Master of our houses, that is, the Protector of our households and our souls, namely the physical fire and God Almighty, both become the subjects of our well-performed daily Vedic sacrifice and the Bestowers upon us of bodily health and happiness and of the greatest and best gifts of life. Hence God is well known to be the Granter of wealth. Therefore, the exercitant, who ever he or she may be, whether the ruler of a kingdom or a poor householder, should daily pray to God to reveal Himself in his or her heart and grant him or her the ability properly to discharge his or her duties in life. In this both the physical fire and God Almighty are referred to. Thus revealing the Being, Attributes and Nature of God to others by these means, namely these devotional exercises, the exercitant should advance his or her corporal well-being. In the same manner, utilising the physical fire for the performance of these exercises, the well-being and nourishment of all physical existents should be advanced.

प्रातः प्रातर्गृहपतिर्नोऽ अग्निः सायंसायं सौमन-
सस्य. दाता । वसोर्वसोर्ऽसुदानऽ एधोन्धानास्त्वा शतं
हिमाऽ ऋषेम ॥ 4.

The second text given above reiterates the idea in the first, with this difference that, the exercitant entertains the desire that he or she should enjoy the full span of life, a hundred winters—years—with the full increase of health and wealth, and that performing these sacrifices he or she may always be saved from all harm.

तस्माद्ब्राह्मणोऽहोरात्रस्य संयोगे सन्ध्यामुपास्ते ।
सज्योतिष्या ज्योतिषो दर्शनात्सोऽस्याः कालः सा
सन्ध्या तत्सन्ध्यायाः सन्ध्यात्वम् ॥ Sadvemsā-brahmanam, IV, 5, 3.

This, the third text lays down that the devotee of God should perform his or her devotional exercise at the junction of night and day. The time for the twilight meditation is just where the time of day seems to meet night-time—the termination of the dark or moonlit night by the gradual rising of the sun. The exercitant should not think of anything else at this time, adore no other being, finite or imaginary, but regularly and straightway, engage himself or herself, heart and soul, in worshipping the Almighty God This is the Twilight Adoration.

उद्यन्तमस्तं यन्तमादित्यसभिध्यायन्कुर्वन् ब्राह्मणो
विद्वान् सकलं भद्रमश्नुते ॥ Taittireyāranyaka,
II, 2, 4.

The fourth text given above says:—“It is only the devotee of the Supreme Being that adores the Eternal, Self-Effulgent and Immutable God All-powerful at the time of sunrise and sunset, that attains perfect bliss." From this testimony we understand that the adoration of God is to performed regularly twice in the day.

पूर्वा सन्ध्यां जपन्तिष्ठेत्सार्धमाकर्दशनात् ।
पश्चिमां तु समासीनः सम्यगृह्णविभावनात् ॥ Manu,
II, 101.

न तिष्ठति तु यः पूर्वा नोपास्ते यश्च पश्चिमाम् ।
स शूद्रवद्बहिष्कार्यः सर्वस्माद्दृष्टजकमणः ॥ 103

The Manusmṛti also concurs in this, for it lays down (in the two stanzas quoted above) that, "the morning twilight adoration of God, the Creator of the universe, preceded by meditation on the signification of the Gayatri and other Vedic texts, should be commenced at about two hours before day-break and continued till sunrise, and the evening twilight adoration should begin just when the sun is about to set and terminated at the appearance of the stars. That man or woman who does not perform his or her morning and evening twilight adoration regularly should be reckoned to have fallen from his or her social status and used as such. Such a person should be made to mend his or her ways or to live like a menial. Such a one should not be allowed even to use the sacred thread, the emblem of the twice-born."

Hence we cannot but put it down as a rule of life that every man or woman should consider the performance of the twilight devotional exercise to be his or her highest and inevitable daily duty, and worship God the Lord of the whole universe punctually everyday, morning and evening.

The Twilight Devotional Exercise

We now explain the first of the five great sacrifices of the Aryas, namely, the Twilight Meditation and Prayer, giving also an interpretation of the Vedic and other texts used in it.

The word 'Sandhya' means that action by which or that time at which the devotee fully meditates on God भक्ता सम्यक् ध्यायन्ति ब्रह्म यस्मिन् काले यस्यां क्रियायां वा. It means a devotional exercise in which the Supreme Being forms the subject of the exercitant's meditation. The time for this meditation is twilight, that is, the dawn before sunrise and the evening just when the sun is about to set, when it is most opportune to praise, pray to, and experience the Presence of God.

Before commencing this exercise the exercitant should attend to the external cleansing of his or her person with water etc., and the internal mental purification of composing his or her self by renouncing (for the time being at least) all ideas of hate or inordinate attachment.

अद्भिर्गात्राणि शुद्ध्यन्ति मनः सत्येन शुद्ध्यति ।
विद्यातपोभ्यां भूतात्मा बुद्धिर्ज्ञानेन शुद्ध्यति ॥ Manu, V, 109.

Laying down this principle in his treatise in the stanza quoted above, Manu says that the external cleansing of the body is to be done with water and the internal cleansing of the self by making the mind adhere to truthfulness, the soul to advancement by the acquisition of right knowledge and performance of austerities, and the intellect by serious scientific study. But the purification of the internal self, being more important than the external cleansing of the body, is to be preferred to the latter and always attended to, in as much as it is the sine qua non for right and successful meditation. the only means, for the attainment of a vision of the Supreme Being. Then the exercitant should sprinkle water slowly over his or her head, eyes, and other parts of the body with a few blades of the Kusa grass or with the right hand itself so that lethargy may be warded off. This is to be done only in the case of necessity and not otherwise.

After this, the exercitant should perform three deep breathings by first expelling the breath through the nostrils and then stopping breathing as long as possible. The second step is to inhale slowly as much fresh air as possible, and then retaining it inside for some time, after which the first step is to be repeated slowly. For three deep breathings the exercitant has to repeat each of the two steps thrice. The exercitant should then tie up his or her hair of head or manage to keep it covered so that it may not become a source of distraction during the exercise, reciting the Holy Gayatri all the while. This is a great prayer to God to be our Helper and Protector. in all our undertakings.

1. The First Symbolic Sipping of Water

शन्नो देवीरभिष्टय आपो भवन्तु पीतये । शंयो-
रभि स्रवन्तु नः ॥ YVXXXV112

This is the twelfth stanza of the thirty-sixth chapter of the Yajur-Veda, which is to be recited while sipping the water at the beginning of the Sandhya. The word अप् is derived from the root आप् meaning 'to pervade, and is always used in the feminine gender and plural number. The word देवी is derived from the root द्रिवु meaning 'to sport', etc. The text means :

“May the Omnipotent God, the Illuminator of, and the Bestower of bliss upon all, be so gracious as to impart to us the prosperity and happiness desired by us in our earthly life and also the perfect bliss of final emancipation. May He ever shower His blessings upon us and make us happy.” Thus praying to God with this text, the exercitant should thrice sip a little water. If no water be available this sipping need not be done but the prayer should be offered simply by reciting the text. The purpose of the sipping is to clear the throat of phlegm or any such obstruction.<sup>131</sup>

यत्र लोकांश्च कोशांश्चापो ब्रह्मजना त्रिदुः ।
असञ्च यत्र सञ्चान्तस्कम्भं तं ब्रूहि कतमः श्रिदेव सः ॥
AV, X, 7, 10.

The above text is our authority in interpreting the word आपः as we have done here above. अर् is the name of the Supreme Being ब्रह्मर् in Whom all the worlds, the primordial atomic matter, the original source of the universe, the unmanifest subtle element. ether, etc., and the gross, concrete things, the evolutes of primordial matter, ever, remain stable. He is also called सुम्भ the Firm. If someone were to ask what nature of being He is and where, the answer is :—He is Immanent in all and Pervades all. Understand Him alone to be the Deity you aspire to attain and Worthy of your adoration.

Indriyasparsha. i. e. Prayer Accompanied by Symbolical Touching of Parts of the Body,

ओश्म् वाग्वाक् ॥ ओश्म् प्राणः प्राणः ॥
ओश्म् चक्षुः चक्षुः ॥ ओश्म् श्रोत्रं श्रोत्रम् ॥ ओश्म्
नाभः ॥ ओश्म् हृदयम् ॥ ओश्म् कण्ठः ॥ ओश्म्
शिरः ॥ ओश्म् बाहुभ्यां यशोवल्गम् ॥ ओश्म् कर-तलकरपृष्ठे ॥

Translation:—ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Protector of all, वाक् whether I possess the faculty of oral speech, or being dumb have it not, वाक् give me the grace to realise the true purpose of expressing myself in any way. ओ३म् Oh Almighty, God, saviour of all, प्राणः teach me the proper use of my olfactory organ and प्राणः the mouth, both means of in-breathing and out-breathing. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Keeper of all, चक्षुस् whether I possess the faculty of seeing, or being blind have it not, चक्षुस् give me the grace to realise the true purpose of visualising things. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Master of all, श्रोत्रम् whether I possess the faculty of audition or being deaf have it not श्रोत्रम् give me the grace to realise the true purpose of listening to and grasping what is uttered by others. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God. Controller of all, नाभिः give me the grace to understand aright the use of the forces of my body centred in the umbilical region without which life is impossible. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Sustainer of all, हृदयम् give me the grace to understand aright the use of all the forces of my body centred in the cardiac region without which life is impossible. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Supporter of all, कण्ठ give me the grace to understand aright the use of all the forces of my body centred in the region of the throat without which life is impossible. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Overseer of all, शिरस् give me the grace to understand aright the use of all the forces of my body centred in the brain without which no life is possible. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Mightiest of the mighty give me the grace to realise that वाहुभ्याम् the right use of one's arms or physical strength is to do deeds that would advance one's power corporal' mental and spiritual, and fetch one good repute. ओ३म् Oh Almighty God, Felicitator of all करतलभ्रपृष्ठे give me the grace to realise that my hands, bodily strength, and all that I possess are intended for the purpose of welcoming all my brethren with open arms, and to keep all my transactions with my fellowmen, above board.

Touching the parts of your body while repeating this formula pray to God that they may be safe and sound.

(With a few blades of Kusa grass, or the index and the middle finger of the right hand dipped in water kept in a small clean vessel near by, touch both the corners of your mouth, both the nostrils, both the eyes, both the ears, the navel, the pit of the neck, the crown of the head, the two shoulders, and the palm and back of each hand, respectively, while slowly muttering each part of the formula. This formula is not a Vedic text. It is taken from some ritualistic work or is modelled on such a word. The exercitant should bear in mind that he or she should utter the names of each part of the body, and in this act, preference should be given to the Vedic Sanskrit language and style.)

Marjanam, or Prayer Accompanied by Symbolical Sprinkling of Water on Each Part of the Body:

ओ३म् भूः पुनातु शिरसि ॥ ओ३म् भुवः
पुनातु नेत्रयोः ॥ ओ३म् स्वः पुनातु कण्ठे ॥ ओ३म्
महः पुनातु हृदये ॥ ओ३म् जनः पुनातु नाभ्याम् ॥
ओ३म् तपः पुनातु पादयोः ॥ ओ३म् सत्यं पुनातु
पुनः शिरसि ॥ ओ३म् स्वं ब्रह्म पुनातु सर्वत्र ॥

Translation:—ओ३म् God Almighty the Illuminator of the multifarious universe,

Subject of the Vedas and all the true sciences of learning and knowledge, the Refuge of the whole universe; the Receptacle of the luminous planets, like the sun and the moon, He who imparts impulse to all beings, the Self-luminous; the Omnipotent Judge, the Imperishable, the knower of the whole universe; may He, भूः the Life-breath of all भुवः the Dispeller of the tribulations of his devotees, स्वः the Imparter of true bliss to the righteous, महः the Mightiest and the Most August of all, जनः the Producer of all, तपस् Light and Intelligence by His Nature पुनातु strengthen and sanctify शिरसि the powers of my reasoning faculty, नेत्रयोः of my eyes and vision, कण्ठे of my speech and throat, हृदये of my heart, नाभ्याम् of my digestive and generative organism, पादयोः of my locomotive organism. May the ever True and Eternal, पुनः always पुनातु strengthen and sanctify the powers शिरसि of all the ramifications of my head at work. May ओ३म् Almighty God, Omnipresent in the whole universe like ether, ब्रह्म the Supreme Being पुनातु strengthen and sanctify सर्वत्र all the faculties of my body.

The sacred symbol ओम् and the expressions भूः, भुवर्, and स्वर्, 'are explained under the Gayatri. God is called महः because He is the Greatest and the Most Adorable of all. As He is the Producer of the whole universe He is called जनः. He is called तपः since He is the Represser of the wicked and as true knowledge is His natural feature.

यः सर्वज्ञः सर्वविद्यस्य ज्ञानमयं तपः । तस्मा-
देतद्ब्रह्म नामरूपमन्नं च जायते ॥ Mundaka. I, 1, 9

“He Who is the Knower of all, He Who exists in all and is accessible to all who are properly disposed, He Whose austerity with which He enlightens the righteous and represses the wicked is the true knowledge which He possesses by His Nature, from that Supreme Being, this universe, composed of all beings having their distinctive names and features, and their victuals, come into being.”

This text is our authority here. He is called सस्यम् as He is Imperishable. As He is Omnipresent He is called ब्रह्म. All these words are therefore the names of God. Thinking of these significations of the names of God, the exercitant should slowly sprinkle each part of his or her body with water (conveyed by means of a few blades of Kusa grass or with the thumb, and the index and middle fingers of the right hand).

Formula to be Recited while making Pranayama:

ओ३म् भूः ॥ ओ३म् भुवः ॥ ओ३म् स्वः
 ओ३म् महः ॥ ओ३म् जनः ॥ ओ३म् तपः ॥
 ओ३म् सत्यम् ॥ Taittiriyaanyaka X, 27.

Translation:—ओ३म् Oh Lord God Almighty, Thou art भूः the Life-breath of all, भुवः the Dispeller of the tribulations of us Thy devotees, स्वः the Imparter of true bliss to us Thy righteous servants, महः the Mightiest and the Most August of all, जनः the producer of the universe and of each being in it, तपः Light and Intelligence by Thy nature and the punisher of the wicked, सत्यम् and ever Truthful and Eternal. <sup>134</sup>

While muttering this formula thinking over the significations of each word in it, the exercitant should perform deep breathing as explained above. The devotee should, by this means give a fixity to his or her self and mind, and mentally merging himself or herself completely in the Supreme Being coexisting with the soul of everyone in His Most Beatific State, enjoy the pleasure of spiritual ecstasy. Like the diver diving in the deep and coming out washed clean the devotee should immerse his or her own self in the Omnipotent and Omnipresent God, the Fount of Right Knowledge and become sanctified.

The Aghamarsana Hymn

ऋतञ्च सत्यञ्चाभीद्धात्तपसोऽध्यजायत । ततो
रात्र्यजायत ततः समुद्रो अर्णवः ॥ RV. X, 190, 1.

समुद्रादर्णवादधि संवत्सरो अजायत । अहो-
रात्राणि त्रिदधद्विश्वस्य मिषतो वशी ॥ 2.

सूर्याचन्द्रमसौ धाता यथा पूर्वमकल्पयत् । दिवञ्च
पृथिवीञ्चान्तरिक्षमथो स्वः ॥ 3.

This Vedic text which along with a prayer to, and praise of, God, gives advice to the devotee to be aloof from evil is called 'aghamarsana.' This hymn teaches us that:

“धाता the Almighty God, the Supporter and protector of the universe, वशी the Controller of all has, यथापूर्वम् in this cycle of creations just in the same manner as in the previous cycles, created the world, and all physical beings including living creatures, according to the deserts of each soul in conformity with the good or evil done by every embodied being including man, that is by every individual soul in her previous embodied existence. सूर्याचन्द्रमसौ The sun and moon He has created and endowed them with the power to diffuse lustre now, just as He did in the previous creations. पृथिवीम् This earth we (live upon and) see, अन्तरिक्षम् the expanse of atmosphere extended in space between the earth and the sun, दिवम् the different planetary 'worlds' that occupy space, have all been designed by Him as from eternity, च and He will again design them in the future creations just in the same manner.

God's mind never works contrary to scientific reality, for being perfect and infinite it ever works uniformly. Increase, decrease, and reversal cannot be postulated of God's Mind, hence the adverbial clause: "He created..as before," is used in the text under comment.

मिषतः Without any effort on His part He has devised अहोरात्राणि night and day, hours, minutes and moments just as He did previously.

If somebody were to question from what material has God created the universe, the answer is that:

तपसः अधि अजायत God has created the whole universe out of His own Infinite Omnipotence, अभीद्धात् for the primordial cause of creation lies manifest in the 'Eyes' of God and is entirely in the power of His Providence. ऋतम् च With the same Infinite Omnipotence coexisting with His Omniscience He has revealed the source of all right scientific knowledge, the Vedas, as in the previous ages and He will do so in the future ages also. सत्यम् च-अधि अजायतः The external atomic matter endowed with the three characteristics of being, action and reaction, otherwise called the immanifest, the indistinguishable being, principal, and primordial matter, which is the cause of the universe composed of gross and subtle entities has become evolved in the form of various material effects just as in the previous creations. ततः रात्रि अजाग्न In compliance with the Omnipotent Providence of God the post-deluvial night of chaos covering a period of time equal to one thousand quartets of cycles succeeds creational cycles in each age.

तमऽ आसीत्तमसा गूळहमग्रेऽप्रकेतं सलिलं
सर्बमाऽ इदम् । तुच्छयेनाम्बविहितं यदासीत्तपसस्त-न्माहिना जायतैकम् ॥ RV. X, 129, 3.

This Rg. Vedic text states this truth. Every cycle of creations, according to this authority, is preceded by a period of time during which all 'things' and all (migratory) souls remain enveloped in darkness. This is the great post-deluvial night, that is, the night after the dissolution of the universe.

समुद्रः It is according to the Omnipotence of God that subsequent to this the vast expanse of water under and over the surface of the earth, as well as अर्णवः in the form of vapour in the atmosphere, the source of rain-clouds, has come into being as in the previous creations, समुद्रात् अर्णवात् which is followed by संवत्सरः अधि अजायत the division of time into years [months, and days,] hours, minutes and seconds. विश्वस्य From the Vedic Lore to the earth, the whole universe has become manifest only through God's Omnipotence. God has created all beings, is Immanent in each, takes account of the good and evil deeds of each, and in an impartial manner dispenses to each the fruit of his or her action in perfect equity.

It is but meet that every man and woman, therefore, realising this truth definitely, should so dispose his or her soul as never to fall into any sin either in thought, word or deed. This is what is called 'aghamarsana', which means the complete discarding of all inclination to sin, knowing that God witnesses what ever is going on in the innermost recesses of the heart of every one.

The purport is that the exercitant revolving the meaning of these stanzas in his or her heart should praise God, that is, meditate on His Divine Attributes, and then pray to Him for help in all good undertakings. The devotee should ever try to feel sincere compunction at his or her foibles, realising that assuming the body of a human being he or she has not been able to do any good to the world. God has created multifarious things for the benefit of all creatures in the world. May God help us in this our resolve that we may always impart happiness to our fellow-beings

The devotee should then feel himself or herself in the Presence of God and adore Him. The adoration of God is twofold, namely, one in which you think of Him as a Being endowed with His Divine Attributes, and second, that in which you imagine Him to be free from certain other attributes. In the first method of adoration you meditate on God as Almighty, Merciful, Just, Intelligent, Omnipresent, Immanent, the Producer of all, the Supporter of all, Auspicious, Holy, Eternal, having right Knowledge and Bliss as His distinctive features the Bestower upon His devotees of righteousness of conduct, of riches and other means, of fulfilment of great aspirations, and of final emancipation, the Father, Mother, Kinsman and Friend of all, the King and Judge Divine. In the second method you contemplate on Him as the Beginningless and Endless, that is, having no beginning or end either in time or space to His Being, Unborn and Deathless, that is, who is neither born nor dies, the Formless and Changeless, that is, having no shape and undergoing no mutation in any manner, of Whom colour, taste, smell, touch and sound, cannot be postulated; Who is untouched by injustice, unrighteousness, disease, blemish, ignorance, and impurity; Who cannot be transformed, cut, fettered, perceived by the senses, grasped and shaken; Who never grows small or big, sorrowful or joyous; and Who never does anything contrary to reason.

II. The Second Symbolical Sipping of Water

The exercitant should now recite the text शन्नो देवी given on p. 175 again and sip water thrice as before.

[Facing the eastern quarter, where Thy sun rises, or] in that quarter which I face now, I see, with my mind's eye, Thee the Self-Effulgent God the distinctive feature of whose Nature is perfect right knowledge, the Master of the whole universe, the Unfettered the Protector of all in every way. The rays of Thy Lustrous orb the sun, the years, seasons, months, fortnights, weeks, days and other time divisions brought into being by the contact of the sun and the earth, Oh God are Thy weapons—arrows—means to protect us and whom so-ever—Thy saint or sinner—out of our ignorance we feel inimical towards,—the weaknesses of all these including ourselves Thy devotees, the causes of such hostilities we shove into the mouth of Thy Just Dispensation that all our dross may be burnt off cleansing us and making us bear friendship and brotherly love towards each other.

Oh Almighty God in the southern quarter to my right, with my mind, s eye I visualise Thee ,the Master of all power and pelf. Thou utilisest even the lowest strata of Thy creation, the hosts of inver tebrates for the protection of Thy creatu res, in various ways In this Thy creation, the righteous persons who devote their lives to the working of the good of the worldare Thy weapons—arrows-means to protect us from all harm. Oh Lord God, in the western quarter behind, me I see, with my mind, s eye, Thee the Mightiest of kings as the Master and Protector of all, utilising in Thy Dispensation such creatures of Thy creation as the vertebrates, including poisonous snakes, pythons, and other animals for the safety of Thy devotees, having at Thy disposal as Thy weapons—arrows—means of defence, the various types of articles of food for the safety of the good and the punishment of the wicked. Oh Almighty God, in the northern quarter to my left, I visualise, with my mind's eye, Thee, our Gentle and Noble Divine Patron, showering blessings of peace and bliss on Thy devotees, the Overlord of the universe, manipulating through Thy mighty, eternal Providence, the force of electricity (having full access to the structure of all physical bodies,) and other forces of Nature as Thy weapons — arrows—means of defence for the benefit of the righteous and industrious, and for the punishment of the evil. (The rest as before,)

Oh Lord God, in the zenith overhead, I see, with my mind's eye Thee the Protector of all great beings—of the Vedas to be the Overlord of the whole universe, ordaining everyone devoting his or her life to the safeguarding of the material, moral and spiritual advancement of the human race, to protect Thy creatures, and utilising the rains (and other seasonal natural phenomena) as Thy weapons—arrows means of defence for the safety of Thy devotees from harm, (The rest as before )

Upasthana, i.e., approaching the Presence of God.

उद्भ्रयन्तमसम्परि स्वः पश्यन्त उत्तरम् । देवं देवत्रा
 सूर्यमगन्म ज्योतिरुत्तमम् ॥ Y V. XXX V, 14

Translation:—This and the following three stanzas contain prayers and praises with which the devotee approaches the Divine Majesty of God Oh Almighty God. Thou art beyond the influence of anything that tends to obscure or darken, for Thou art Lustrous by Thy Divine Nature. Thou ever remainst the Same even after the dissolution of the universe. Thou art the Mightiest among the mighty, and the Illuminator of those beings that impart lustre. Thou art the Impeller of all to action. Thou naturally possesseth the Lustre of right Knowledge and art the Greatest of all in goodness. Hence we have approached Thy Divine Majesty through truthfulness in thought, word and deed. It lies in Thy Hands, now to protect us, for we have come to Thee for refuge.

उदुत्यं जातवेदसं देवं वहन्ति केतवः । दृशे विश्वाय

Translation:—The four Vedas, the Rg-Veda, the Yajur-Veda, the Sama-Veda and the Atharva-Veda were revealed by Him, He pervades primordial matter and all the elements (and other beings) He is the Producer of the whole universe and hence the Almighty God is called जातवेदम He is the noblest of all the noble and the Illuminator of the universe, comprising all beings, animate and inanimate. Let us adore that Almighty God that we may be blessed with all right knowledge. The four Vedas the distinctive features of each individual being in the world, namely their creation, etc serve as signals to lead us on to Him alone. We should adore only that God Almighty the Immanent Mover of the whole universe and no other being.

Translation:—The 'Soul', that is, the 'Mover of all beings, animate and inanimate, is called सूर्य here.

He Who is the Creator, Supporter and Protector of the sun and all other heavenly bodies, the Enlightener of him or her who, free from likes and dislikes, is the well-wisher of all alike, the Imparter of lustre to lustrous bodies like the sun, and the Energiser of the vital force itself; the Encourager of him or her who devotes himself or herself to works of righteousness, and the Actuator of the twofold vital energy, namely, the enlivening and the cleansing, and of the thermic force; the Sublimest by His Divine Nature ever shining in the hearts of His righteous devotees; and the Omnipotent Fire that consumes all the miseries and ills of the righteous, may That Great God reveal His actual Self in our hearts.

Translation:—The Supreme Being the Seer of all, the Great Benefactor of those who are learned and righteous, and the Maker of the universe, Who is ever in His True and Most Beatific State in it before, behind it, (or after its creation), and in or during its existence; may we live and be able to have the Divine Vision of that Almighty God for a hundred winters (years) the full span of our life, may we live in Him for a hundred years, may we hear His Vedic Word for a hundred years, may we, be His Grace, be free, and suffer no humiliation of any sort through corporal or mental infirmity, all our life, nay, may we live with our sight, hearing, speech, intellect and all other faculties unimpaired, enjoying freedom even for more than a hundred years. May we live the full span of life with the perfect health of body, mind, and soul and in true bliss<sup>135</sup>.

Only this Supreme Being is the One God worthy of being adored by all mankind. Those who forget

Him and take to the worship of some or other wretched finite creature. (some idol, stock or stone, or metal image, some human being or beast, some reptile or worm) live like beasts, bowed under the burden of multifarious miseries all their lives (insentient to all humiliations and privations). Hence the devotee should meditate over the vast signification of these beautiful Vedic prayer texts while slowly muttering them, attempt mentally to approach the Divine Majesty of God and totally immerse his or her soul in that Ocean of Mercy and feel the joys of spiritual ecstasy.

This is the meaning of 'upasthana' उपस्थान<sup>136</sup>.

The Great Savitri

भूर्भुवः स्वः ॥ तत्सवितुर्वरेण्यं भर्गो देवस्य धीमहि ।
धियो यो नः प्रचोदयात् ॥

Rg-Veda, III, 63, 10; Yajur-Veda, III, 25; XXII, 9; XXX, 2; XXXVI, 3; Sama-Veda, II, 6, 3; Atharva-Veda, XVII, 70, (only by 'proxy,' that is, not the very Gayatri itself but its eulogy).

The sacred Syllable ओम्, composed of three letters अ, उ, and म्, is the greatest of all the Names of God, for, it connotes the significations of all the other Names of God. For example, take the first letter entering in the make-up of this syllable, अ. This means, (1) बिराट्, 'Perfectly Resplendent, which,*as applied to God, indicates that He is the Illuminator of the multifarious universe. (2) अग्नि, 'Self-Effulgent,' 'Fore-most,' etc., that is, He possesses true knowledge by His very Nature, and is accessible to His devotees everywhere. (3) विश्वः 'Abode,' or 'Habitat,' that is, in God the whole universe has its residence, so to say, and He also has His access to every part of the universe.

The second component of the sacred Syllable, उ, means: (1) हिरण्यगर्भ, having the sun and other lustrous heavenly bodies in His 'grasp,' and Who is the Maker of all these lustrous planets. The synonyms of ज्योतिः 'light' are हिरण्यम्, अमृतम्, and कीर्ति<sup>137</sup>.. (2) वायुः 'Impeller,' 'Propeller,' for He has infinite powers, and is the Supporter of the universe. (3) तैजसः, 'Source of the whole mass of lustre,' for He is Lustrous by His very Nature and the Illuminator of the whole universe and every being in it.

The last component of this Syllable, म, means (1) ईश्वरः, 'Almighty God,' as He is the Creator of the whole universe, the All-powerful Master of all, and the Maker of justice. (2) आदित्यः the Imperishable. (3) ब्रह्म, Whose Nature itself is right knowledge, and Who is Omniscient.

This, in brief, is the interpretation of the sacred Syllable ओ३म्.

Now we explain the other sacred Syllables, महाव्याहृतयः that is 'Great Utterances.' (1) The first is भूः: It is the nature of the vital force that it energises the living body. As God is the Cause of our existence and dearer to us than our life itself, He is called भूः; (2) The second is भुवः This means the other vital force that cleanses the living body of impurities and encumbrances and imparts it ease and agility. God ever keeps all His devotees, deserving final emancipation and striving for it, aloof from all evil and gives them their desired bliss in 'this' very earthly life after making them fit to receive it. Hence He is called भुवः. (3) स्वः is the vital force that circulates in the whole body and propels the current of blood all through the system. God permeates the whole universe, keeps all beings under control, and is the Abode of

all. Hence He is called स्वर.

The other four Vyahrtis has been explained elsewhere, q. v.

The exercitant should always utter these four Syllables before the Gayatri during his or her meditation or recitation.

Now we explain the Gayatri Itself.

Savituh—सवितुः—Who is the Creator of the whole univese and the Bestower of power and pelf upon His devotees,

Devasya—देवस्य—Who is the Enlightener of the souls of all and the Imparter of all bliss,

Varenyam—वरेण्यम्—Who is the Most Acceptable, and

Bhargah—भर्गः—Whose Nature is Pure Intelligence,

Tat—तत्—Him,

Dhimahi—धीमहि—Shall we surely entertain in our souls with the utmost love and devotion.

What is the purpose of this endeavour?

Yah—यः—For He is God Almighty, and He,

Nah-नः our

Dhiyah-धियः—intellectual faculties,

Prachodayat-प्रचोदयात्—shall always safeguard us from all evil that we might otherwise fall into and lead them on to do only what is good.

Hence it is incumbent upon every man and woman, every boy and girl, able to grasp things, to adore only the One, True, Almighty God, described in this great Vedic text, the Gayatri, That God Who is Absolute Intelligence and Absolute Bliss by His very Nature, the Ever-knowing, Ever-free, Unborn, Deathless, Formless. All-Powerful, Omnipresent, Merciful, the Maker and Supporter of the whole universe, so that all may be devoted to Him and attain the inclination and ability, to do righteous deeds, to acquire means of life by just methods, may secure fulfilment of noble aspirations and in the end acquire final emancipation during 'this' earthly life itself.

None should adore any other being, finite or imaginary.

This, in short, is what the Gayatri teaches.

The 'Offertory'

Having praised and worshipped Almighty God by reciting Vedic texts and meditating upon their significations, the exercitant should then perform the 'Offertory' as prescribed below:

हे ईश्वर दयानिधे—Oh Lord God Almighty,
Infinite Fount of mercy,

भवत्कृपया यत्किंचित्तमन् कर्म अस्माभिः कृतम अस्ति— by Thy Grace whatever good deed has been done by us,

तत् सर्वम all that,

इदम च जपोपासनादि कर्म—and this performance of our devotional exercise of the recitation of the texts of the Holy Vedas,
Thy adoration and other acts,

तुभ्यम् एव समर्पयामः—we whole-heartedly offer to Thee,

यथा भवत्कृपया—so that by Thy Grace,

विश्वस्य कर्तारम् पालकम् अस्माद्गर्भ्यः स्वभक्तेभ्यः सर्वं सुखानाम् प्रदातारम् च सम्यक् प्राप्य—fully attaining Thee the Maker and Sustainer of the universe and the Bestower of all happiness
on Thy devotees like ourselves,

यम अस्मिन् एव जन्मनि अस्मिन् एव संसारे शीघ्रम् - we may soon, in this very life, and in the performance of our these very worldly duties,

पुरुषार्थचतुष्टयस्य सिद्धिं सम्पादयेम—fully achieve the accomplishment of the four-fold ideal of human existence,

अर्थात्—that is,

अस्माकम् लौकिकव्यवहारे एव सत्य-न्याय-आचरण रूपम् धर्मम् समाचर्य—following in our daily duties themselves the law of righteousness consisting in the practice of truthfulness in thought, word and deed, and of justice in our dealings others,

धर्मेण जीवनावश्यकपदार्थानां-प्राप्तिरूपम्-अर्थम् संसाध्य fully achieving our object by acquiring all the means necessary for our earthly life strictly in accordance with the law of righteousness,

धर्मार्थाभ्याम्-सम्यग्व्यवसितभ्याम्-इष्टानाम्-भोगानाम् महतीनाम्-आकांक्षारणाम् च पूर्तिम् सम्प्राप्य—fully attaining the fulfilment of our desired objects and great aspiration by thoroughly adopting in our daily life the laws of righteousness and just acquisition of riches,

अस्मिन् जन्मनि शरीरपतनात्-प्राक्-एव सर्वदुःखक्लेश-दोषोच्छेदरूपम् मोक्षम् समासादयेम—we may certainly attain in this life before our corporal existence comes to an end, final emancipation in the form of the extirpation of all our sufferings, miseries, and evil inclinations,

सर्वत्र सर्वथा सर्वदा ज्ञानचक्षुषा परमात्मनः दर्शनरूपम्
आनन्दम् च अनुभवेम—experience, everywhere, in every way and always, the joy of the Vision of God by our mind's eye,

कृतकृत्याश्च भवेम—and have the satisfaction of having acquitted ourselves well
in life-

Obeisance

After this offertory', the exercitant should make obeisance to God, by devoutly reciting the following text:—

नमः शम्भवाय च मयोभवाय च नमः शङ्कराय
च मयस्कराय च नमः शिवाय च शिवतराय च ॥
Yv. XVI, 41. <sup>138</sup>

Let us now bow in awe before God
Almighty,

The Infinite Source of all happiness,
The Untiring Disburser of earth's joys sublime,

The Fount Unfathomable of all that is auspicious,

Whose Being is Eternal Bliss,
 Author of all that is Good and only Good,

Donor of all joys to His devotees,

Impeller of the righteous in the execution of what is right,

The Most Holy and Most Majestic,

Who alone has the power to bestow
 final emancipation upon His righteous servants,

Obeisance! Obeisance to the Supreme Being.

ॐ शान्तिः । शान्तिः शान्तिः ॥

Benediction and Prayer for Peace

May there be peace to all from external physical entities, may there be peace from our internal feelings, our own selves, and may there be peace from Divine Justice and Wrath.

(Before this Yv. XXXVI, 17—Aryabhivinaya II 25 may also be chanted).

Prayers and Exhortations.

विश्वानि देव सर्वतदु रितानि परा सुव । यद्भद्रं तन्नऽ
आ सुव ॥ Yv. XXX, 3.

Oh Lord God Almighty, Creator of the universe, (and Source of all great beings), of Holiest nature (and Dispenser of true happiness, be gracious, we beseech Thee, to dispel all our miseries (vices and evil propensities) and to bestow upon us what is good.

हिरण्यगर्भः समवर्तताम्रे भूतभ्य जातः पतिरेकऽ
आसीत् । स दाधार पृथिवीं द्यामुतेमां कर्मो दे गय हविषा
विधेम ॥ Yv. Yv. XIII, 4.

Regulating the faculties of the soul and the mind and living upright lives, with fervent devotion, we should serve Him Who is Blissful and Holy, the well-known Self-Effulgent Creator, (Supporter and Illuminator) of all luminous bodies like the sun, the One Master of the universe Who existed from all eternity before creation. It is He that sustains this earth, -(the intermediate region) and the heavens.

यऽ आत्मदा बलदा यस्य त्रिश्रुऽ उपासते प्रशिपं
यस्य देवाः । यस्य छायामृतं यस्य मृत्युः कस्मै देवाय
हविषा विधेम ॥ Yv. XXV, 13.

Let us busy ourselves heart and soul, in the practical observance in our daily lives of the Commandments of that Bliss-imparting God, Who giveth to the devout true knowledge of (Himself as well as of) the soul, Who blesses individuals and societies (that remember Him), with strength, physical, moral and spiritual, Whom all the enlightened adore, and Whose visible and truthful rule in the universe the righteous acknowledge, Whose Omnipotent Providence shadows us both in final emancipation and death.

यः प्राणतो निमित्ततो महितौकऽ उद्राजा जगतो
बभूव । यऽ ईशेऽ अस्य द्विपञ्चतुष्पदः कस्मै देवाय
हविषा विधेम ॥ Yv. XXIII, ३.

Let us offer all the best we have, and devoutly resort to that Blissful God, the Giver of all wealth, Who, in His infinite Glory, is the One and Sole Ruler of all creation, animate and inanimate,—of the very breathing and winking of eyes of every living being—bestowing (with His unfathomable Wisdom) corporal existence on all creatures—bipeds (like men), and quadrupeds (likes the cow) and all other beings, and controlling them.

येन द्यौरुग्रा पृथिवी च दृढा येन स्वः स्तभितं येन
नाकः । योऽ अन्तरिक्षे रजसो विमानः कस्मै देवाय हविषा
विधेम ॥ YV. XXXII, 6.

Let us adore with all the strength of our body, mind and soul, that Blissful Supreme Being, the Lord of all our desires, by Whom the formidable sun, the earth and other planets are fixed (in their orbits), by Whom the quota of earthly happiness and the enjoyment of final beautitude according to the deserts of each finite being (endowed with life) are established on a firm basis, and Who

(after the period of the dissolution of the cosmos is over) creates the different planets (or worlds) and sets them moving in space (lets them fly like birds, so to say, in different directions in the welkin).

प्रजापते न त्वदेताम्यन्यो विश्वा जातानि प्ररिता
बभूव । यत्कामास्ते जुहुमस्तन्नोऽ अस्तु वयं स्याम
पतयो रयीणाम् ॥ RV. X, 121, 10.

Oh Lord of all creatures, no other than Thou can control and govern all these created things, May the things desiring which we pray to Thee be ours. May we be lords and protectors of all good things of the world.

स नो बन्धुर्जनिता स विधाता धामाग्नि वेद
भुवनानि विश्वा । यत्र देवा अमृतमानशानास्तृतीये
ध मिन्नध्वैरयन्त ॥ YV. XXXII, 10

To His devotees, He is kind and loving like a sincere kinsman. He is the Producer and Disposer of the entire universe (seen and unseen). He knows

(by direct contact) all the worlds, and the name, place and source of everything (visible and invisible). The Source of final beatitude (infinitely above the vanishing joys of the world and untouched by its shortcomings and miseries), in Him do the enlightened attain final emancipation (and move about freely with absolutely no hindrance of any kind in space, having free access to all the worlds, all places and everything according to their wishes).

अग्ने नय सुपथा रायेऽ अस्मान्त्वश्वानि देव
वयुनानि विद्वान् । युयोध्यस्मज्जुहुराणमेनो भूयिष्ठास्ते
नमऽ उक्तिं विधेम ॥ YV. XI, 16.

Oh Self-Effulgent, Omniscient, and Omnipotent Lord, we offer unto Thee profound obeisance and praise. Cast out from us all debasing and sinful desires and habits and lead us, by the path of righteousness, to the attainment of all true knowledge that we may enjoy perfect bliss<sup>139</sup>.

THE HAVANA

The Vedic sacrifice of burnt offerings होम, हवन, or अग्निहोत्र, as it is called in Sanskrit, is to be performed both morning and evening [for the purification of the air, the keeping alive of the study of Sanskrit and the Vedás, and as a symbolic ritual to remind men, women and children that they have to put forth effort to advance materially, morally and spiritually always invoking upon, and fortifying themselves with a firm living faith in, God, the Source of all strength, making it a point to study the Sanskrit language and read His Vedic Word regularly].

1. Sipping of Water

(a) ओ३म् अमृतोपस्तरणमसि स्वाहा ॥

Oh Almighty God, Thy Omnipotent Providence is the Receptacle of our final beatitude. Teach us that we may realise this in truth.

With the uttering of this text all the performers of the sacrifice, or those who sit nearest the fire-place, should sip water once as already explained. The water should be provided in small clean metal cups.

(b) ओ३म् । अमृतापिधानमसि स्वाहा ॥

Oh Almighty God, Thy Omniscient Providence is the safety of our final beatitude. Grant us the grace that we may realise this truth and live up to it in thought, word, and deed. With this the second sipping is to be done as before.

(c) ओ३म् । सत्यं यशः श्रीर्मयि श्रीः श्रयतां स्वाहा ॥ तैत्तिरीयआरण्यक ॥१०॥३२॥३५॥

Oh Most Merciful God, may the strength of truth, a good name, the regard of great deeds, worldly prosperity and spiritual advancement resort to our endeavours for our good as well as that of others. May we lay claim only to what is ours and never court others' possessions.

With this the third sipping is to be performed.

2. Symbolic Laving of Parts of the Person

(a) ओ३म् । वाङ्म आस्येऽस्तु—Oh Almighty God, may my tongue and all the organs of utterance be ever blessed with the full power of speech.

(b) ओ३म् नस्रोर्मेप्राणोऽस्तु—Oh Almighty God, may my nostrils (and the trachea) be the receptacles of healthy vital air.

(c) ओ३म् अक्षोर्मे चक्षुरस्तु—Oh Almighty God, may my eyes be ever blessed with perfect power of sight.

(d) ओ३म् । कर्णयोर्मे श्रोत्रमस्तु—Oh Almighty God, may my ears be ever blessed with perfect power of audition.

(e) ओ३म् । बाह्वोर्मे बलमस्तु—Oh Almighty God, may my arms be ever blessed with the strength of prowess.

(f) ओ३म् । ऊर्वांमोऽञ्जोऽस्तु—Oh Almighty God, may my thighs be ever blessed with the strength necessary for quick motion and endurance in travel.

ओ३म् । अरिष्टानि मेऽङ्गानि तनूस्तन्वा मे सह सन्तु ॥
पारस्करगृह्यसूत्र ॥ १ । ३ । २५ ॥

(g) Oh Almighty God, may (these and) all other limbs of my body be safe from all harm, rendering my whole body healthy and sound for my life's work.

While uttering (a) to (f) dip two fingers of the right hand each time in water and touch the respective parts on both sides and while reciting (g) dip the right hand in water and wash both the hands.

3. Putting Fire in the Sacrificial Dish

(a) ओ३म् । भूर्भुवः स्वः ॥

Gobhilagrhyasutra, I, 1, 11.

For the Glorification of Thee, Oh God Almighty, the Energiser of the whole universe, the sanctifier of Thy devotees, and the Controller of, and the Imparter of the bliss of final emancipation to, the righteous, we now commence this sacrifice.

For this sacrifice the performers should provide themselves with a little earthen lamp or a little metal dish, with a small quantity of pure (preferably cow's) molten butter and a cotton wick in it. This lamp should be lighted (preferably with tinder) and a bit of pure indigenous camphor (with no adulterants, such as animal fat) ignited from this lamp should then be put in the metal sacrificial dish among little sticks of Sandal, Ficus Religiosa, Mango, Wild Fig, Banyan, Butea Frondosa or the Silk Cotton tree, already arranged for the sacrifice. After chanting the above text, while this is proceeding the following stanza should be recited:—

(b) भूर्भुवः स्वर्गो रिव भूम्ना पृथिवीव वारम्णा ।
तस्यस्ते पृथिवि देवयजनि पृष्ठे ऽग्निमन्नादमन्नाद्याया- दधे ॥ YV. III, 5.

I establish, for the purpose of obtaining all sorts of food, the sacrificial fire which consumes all food (fuel) offered in it, on the bed of the hearth directly in contact with the surface of the earth well known as the place where the righteous perform their good deeds—the fire which on account of its most potent properties can be compared to the vast celestial region or the excellent earth itself, and which in principle is identical with the ultimate source of thermic energy existing on the earth [as the physical fire], in the atmospheric region [as lightning], and in the heavens [as the sun].

3. Fanning the Sacrificial Fire

After the lighted camphor has been placed upon the sticks in the dish, a few more sticks should be placed over and around the burning camphor, and the fire fanned to the accompaniment of the chanting of the following texts:—

उद्बुध्यस्वाग्ने प्रतिजागृहि त्वमिष्टापूर्ते सः
 सृजेथामर्यं च । अस्मिन्सधस्थेऽध्युत्तरस्मिन् विश्वे
 देवा यजमानश्च सीदत । YV. XV, 54.

Oh leader, arise thou and be wakeful in all thy activities, May thou and these people of thine work in unison for the fulfilment of thy desires and the accomplishment of the works of public utility. May you all, all the elite and the worker of philanthropy, be established in the householder's stage the most important of all the stages of life <sup>140</sup>.

4. Feeding the Fire with Fuel

When the fire is gradually spreading to all the sticks, three sticks of any of the trees mentioned already, measuring about eight finger-breadths (about five inches) each in length, should be dipped in molten butter and put one by one separately into the sacrificial fire in the dish to the accompaniment of the chanting of the following texts:—

(a) अयन्त इष्म आत्मा जातवेदस्तेनेध्यम्ब वर्धस्व
चेद्ब वर्धय चास्मान्प्रजया पशुभिर्ब्रह्मवर्चसेनाम्नाद्येन
सप्रेधय स्वाहा ॥ इदमग्नये जातवेदसे । इदम् मम ॥

Oh Almighty God, in Whom the Vedas have their origin, this my soul is Thy fuel. Mayst Thou get ablaze and advance in glory by the fire of Divine love consuming her, so that Thou wouldst surely bless us with worthy offspring, followers and dependants, with good cows and cattle, and fuse us together with clean, pure food and other things necessary for life of a quality entirely in keeping with, and acquired by means fully justifiable by the sanction of, Thy Vedic Law, so that we may always abide by truth in thought, word, and deed.

All this we entreat of Thee, we ask only for the glory of Thy Name Who knowest all born beings, and not actuated by any selfish motives.

With this put one stick in the dish.

(b) समिधार्ग्निं दुवस्यत घृतेर्बोधयतातिथिम ।

आस्मिन्हव्या जुहोतन स्वाहा ॥ (YV. III, 1.) इदमग्नये । इदन्न मम ॥

सुसमिद्धाय शोचिषे घृतं तीव्रं जुहोतन । अग्नये जातवेदसे स्वाहा ॥ (YV. III, 2.) इदमग्नये जातवेदसे । इदन्न मम ॥

Oh doer of good works, set the sacrificial fire ablaze by means of good fuel and pure fragrant and invigorating material like clarified butter, feeding it with all good disinfecting and nourishing articles as you would entertain a respectable guest. You should liberally offer in it pure and healthy things worthy of sacrifice.

Vouchsafe me the purity of motive, Oh Lord, that this act which I perform now, and all other actions of my life, I may do only for the glorification of Thee, the Leader and Enlightener of all, and offer all up to Thee, never priding myself over it or thinking of arrogating to my own selfish ends the fruit of any of them.

When the sacrificial fire is thus well lit you should offer into it molten butter.

With these two texts, put in the second stick.

(c) तं त्वा समिद्धिरङ्गिरो घृतेन वर्धयामसि ।
 बृहच्छोचा यविष्ठय स्वाहा ॥ (YV. III, 3.) इद-
 मग्नयेऽङ्गिरसे । इदन्न मम ॥

This sacrificial fire if we utilise it properly, feeding it with suitable fuel and water, can be a means of locomotion, of conveying things from one place to another, to illuminate places brightly, and will be most helpful in joining and disjoining gross material objects.

Vouchsafe us the wisdom to understand, Oh Lord, that this act which we perform now and all the actions of our life, we have to do and offer up to Thee for the glorification of Thy Name, Who art the Self-effulgent Enlightener of all and the Inner Self that impels the whole universe, so that we may have no selfish contact with any of our deeds.

With this put in the third stick,

5. Oblations of Molten Butter

अयन्त इध्म आत्मा जातवेदस्तेनेध्यस्व वर्धन्व
चेद्बु वर्धय चास्मान्प्रजया पशुभिर्ब्रह्मवर्चसेनात्राद्येन
समेवय स्वाहा ॥ इदमग्नये जातवेदसे । इदन्न मम ॥

[For translation see (4) (a).]

This text should be recited five times, each time an oblation of molten butter being poured with a ladle (or spoon) over the fire in the dish.

6. Sprinkling of Water

(a) ओ३म् । अदितेऽनुमन्यस्व—Oh Almighty God, Thy Providence is irrefragable; condescend to accede to our wishes.

(b) ओ३म् । अनुमतेऽनुमन्यस्व—On Almighty God, Thou art the Kindest and the Most Condescending, please accede to our wishes.

(c) ओ३म् सरस्वत्यनुमन्यस्व । गोभिल गृह्यसूत्र
१।३।१-३।—Oh Almighty God, Lord of Vedic Speech, condescent to accede to our wishes.

(d) देव सवितः प्रसुव यज्ञं प्रसुव यज्ञपतिं भगाय ।
दिव्यो गन्धर्वः केतपूः केतं नः पुनातु वाचस्पतिर्वाचनः
स्वदतु ॥

May the great earth (and our father-land) our impeller to deeds of glory fully bring about unity and solidarity amongst us, and may she, in a special manner, be the source of encouragement to him who is the protector of our unity and solidarity for our greater good. May Almighty God, the Wonderful Supporter of the universe, the Purifier of man's mind, purify our understanding, and may the Protector of the Eternal Vedic Law enable us to realise fully in our lives the truth of His Holy Vedic Speech.

With the chanting of these texts, sprinkle water all around the altar, that is, with (a) towards the east, (b) west, (c) north, and (d) south and all around.

7. Oblations of Molten Butter

(a) ओ३म् । अग्नये स्वाहा ॥ इदमग्नये । उदन्न
मम ॥ गो. गृ. सू. १।२।२४.

Oh Almighty God, grant us the wisdom to realise that this act and all the actions of our life are to be done and totally offered up to Thee, our Lord Supreme, for the glorification of Thy Name; for, whatever we have, the whole of this world, is designed only for that end, and that we can have no selfish contact with anything we do.

With this pour a libation of molten butter on the fire in the dish towards the northern side.

(b) ओ३म् । सोमाय स्वाहा ॥ इदमसोमाय ।
इदन्न मम ॥

Oh Almighty God, grant us the wisdom to realise that this act and all the actions of our life are to be done and offered entirely to Thee, the Creator of the universe, for whatever exists in this created universe, including ourselves, is designed only for the glorification of Thee, the Source of all wealth, and we can therefore, have no selfish contact with anything.

With this pour a libation of molten butter on the fire in the dish towards the southern side.

(8) Offerings in the Centre of the Dish

(a) ओ३म् । प्रजापतये स्वाहा ॥ इदं प्रजापतये ।

इदन्न मम ॥

Oh Almighty God, grant us the good sense to realise that this act and all the actions of our life are to be done and entirely offered to Thee, the Master of all creatures, for whatever exists, including ourselves, is intended only for the glorification of Thee, the Lord of all creatures, and that we can have no selfish motive in doing anything.

(b) ओ३म् । इन्द्राय स्वाहा ॥ इदम् इन्द्राय ।

इदन्न मम ॥

Oh Almighty God, grant us the wisdom to understand that this act and all the actions of our life are to be done and entirely offered to Thee, the Master of all power and pelf, for whatever we possess—the whole universe itself including ourselves, is intended only for the glorification of Thee, the Lord of all creatures, and that we can have no selfish contact with anything.

With the chanting of these two texts, two oblations of molten butter should be offered in the middle of the dish.

(9) Oblations of Molten Butter along with Other Sacrificial Material

(A) The following texts are for the morning sacrifice.

(a) ओ३म् । सूर्यो ज्योतिर्ज्योतिः सूर्यः स्वाहा ॥

Oh Almighty God, Thou art the Prime Mover of the universe That imparts lustre to all beings, and to this end, Thou hast created the sun that yields light and heat that keep all physical things safe in their true nature.

(b) ओ३म् । सूर्यो वचो ज्योतिर्वचः स्वाहा ॥

Through the sun Thou givest us strength, the Symbol of Thine own Omnipotence, that we may do great deeds in life for the glorification of Thy Name.

(c) ओ३म् । ज्योतिः सूर्यः सूर्यो ज्योतिः स्वाहा ॥

He is the Light that lights our path through the night of doubts and difficulties, and He is the Sun That awakens us when we are in danger of succumbing to moral and spiritual stupor, that we should under all circumstances live up to His Vedic Truth.

ओ३म् । स्रजूर्देवेन सवित्रा सजूरुषसेन्द्रवत्या
जुषास्यः सूर्यो वेतु स्वाहा ॥

(d) The sun being ever in contact with the world of physical beings created by God, Who by His Almighty Providence is immanent in all beings, in unison with the dawn resplendent with the glory of the early rising sun draws up the fine atoms of the material offered in the sacrificial fire and diffuses it far and wide.

With these, four oblations of molten butter should be offered in the morning, each accompanied by an oblation of other sacrificial material as prescribed already. The latter can be offered by any number of persons present.

(B) The following texts are for the evening sacrifice:

(a) ओ३म् । अग्निज्योतिर्ज्योतिरग्निः स्वाहा ॥

Oh Almighty God, Thou art the Self-Effulgent Source of all light and Thou providst us with the thermic energy that yields us light to see physical things with, in their true essential nature.

(b) ओ३म् । अग्निर्बर्चो ज्योतिर्बचः स्वाहा ॥

Through the thermic energy Thou givest us a power, the symbol of Thine own Omnipotence, with which we can do great things for the good of all humanity.

(c) ओ३म् । अग्निर्ज्योतिर्ज्योतिरग्निः स्वाहा ॥

This is (a) above simply repeated, and hence should not be recited aloud.

(d) ओ३म् । सजूर्देवेन सवित्रा सजू रात्र्येन्द्र-वत्या जुषाणो अग्निर्वेतु स्वाहा ॥ YV. III, 9&10.

The thermic force, being ever in contact with the universe created by God the Omnipotent and being well utilised at night time when generally the air is powerful, reaches all physical things, and as is its true nature, pervades them through and through (by means of its light and heat).

With these, four oblations of molten butter and other sacrificial material should be offered in the evening just in the same manner as in the morning.

(10) Oblations for Both Morning and Evening

(a) ओ३म् । भूग्नये प्राणाय स्वाहा ॥ इदमग्नये
प्राणाय । इदन्न मम ॥ *

Oh Almighty God, Who art the Source of the being of the whole universe and dear to us, as the very vital force enlivening our corporal being, grant that we may dedicate our all to Thee, for this whole universe visible and invisible, exists for the glorification of Thee, Source of its life, and that we may not have any contact of selfishness in our relations therewith.

(b) ओ३म् । भुवर्वायवेऽपानाय स्वाहा ॥ इदं
वायवेऽपानाय । इदन्न मम ॥

Oh Almighty God, grant us that we may entirely dedicate ourselves to Thee, the Omnipotent Dynamis That keeps the universe together, Who art the Sanctifier of Thy devotees and the Bestower of final beatitude upon the righteous. This act and all the actions of our life are for the glorification of Thee, Whose Omnipotent Divine Providence unites and purifies the universe (of all evil and disharmony), and we do not lay claim to the fruit of any of them.

(c) ओ३म् । स्वरादित्याय व्यानाय स्वाहा ॥
इदमादित्याय व्यानाय । इदन्न मम ॥

Oh Lord God, irrefragable in Thy Might, Who pervadest the whole universe, regulatest each being in it and grantst to the worthy final beatitude wherever he or she may be, vouchsafe that we may live up to Thy Truth wholeheartedly in thought, word, and deed. May we understand, Oh God, that this act as well as all the actions of our life are for the glorification of Thy Name Who art Perfect and Omnipresent, and that we must not soil any of them by the touch of selfishness.

(d) ओ३म् । भूर्भुवः स्वरग्निवाय्वादित्येभ्यः
 प्राणापानव्यानेभ्यः स्वाहा ॥ इदमग्निवाय्वादित्येभ्यः
 प्राणापानव्यानेभ्यः । इदन्न मम ॥

Oh Almighty God, Source of our being, purification and bliss, may this resolve be fully conducive to the welfare of our thermic, dynamic and optic energies, and to that of our threefold vitality, namely, the first that enlivens, the second that cleanses and the third that circulates blood pervading the whole system. Oh Lord ! may I realise that this action now being done by us and all the actions of our whole life are designed by Thee to be beneficial to the universal thermic, dynamic and optic energies, and the universal vital force that energises the whole creation, the other vital force that Purifies it and the third that permeates it through and through unifying the whole, and that we should have no selfish contact with any of them.

(e) ओ३म् । आपो ज्योतीरसोऽमृतं ब्रह्म भूर्भुवः
 स्वरों स्वाहा ॥

Oh Lord God Almighty, vouchsafe that we may fully realise that thou art All-pervading, the Light of our souls, the Essence of our being, the Source of our final emancipation, the Great Supreme Being, the Cause of the existence of the whole universe, the Sanctifier of Thy devotees, and the Bestower of all happiness upon the righteous and industrious.

(f) ओ३म् यां मेधां देवगणाः पितरश्चोपासते ।
तया मामद्य मेघयाग्ने मेधाधिनिं कुरु स्वाहा ॥ YV.
XXXII, 14.

Oh Self-effulgent God, make me a possessor of superior discriminative understanding by bestowing on me through my truthfulness of conduct that wisdom which the enlightened and the protectors of society, by Thy Grace, attain and utilise.

(g) विश्वानि देव सवितर्दुरितानि परा सुव ।
यद्भद्रं तन्न आ सुव स्वाहा ॥ YV. XXX, 3.

(h) अग्ने नय सुपथा रायेऽ अस्मार्द्धिश्वानि देव

वयुनानि विद्वान् । युयोध्यस्मज्जुहुराणमेनो भूर्यिष्ठान्ते नमऽर्क्ति विधेम स्वाहा ॥ YV. XL, 16.

[For translation of (g) and (h) see pp. 206 & 210]

With each of these eight texts, offer one oblation of molten butter into the sacrificial fire along with an offering of fragrant and nourishing material by one person or any number of those present at the time of the sacrifice.

ओ३म् । सर्वं वै पूर्णं ३ स्वाहा ॥

Oh Almighty God, everything in the universe Thou hast created is perfect in its own way and for the purpose it is intended to serve. May this sacrifice, and also every action of our life, be perfect. and may we Thy devotees also become perfect in every way as Thou art Perfect,

This should be uttered thrice by all present and three oblations of consummation, one each time, offered in the sacrificial fire. All the remaining material may thus be exhausted. Finish with the chanting of YV, XXXVI, 17 Aryabhivinyaya II, 25 and the peace prayer at the end of the Sandhya.

Warning. Charlatans, sectarians and hypocrites do frighten and dissuade simple folk from performing the Sandhya and such other devotional exercises under certain circumstances. For example, it is maintained that the Sandhya adoration must be performed after bath. If this foolish advice were to be taken seriously the daily bath would become the sine qua non of one's daily devotions, with the result that, if one were not to bathe for some reason or other one would ipso facto be excused from the Sandhya. Again till one took one's bath one would be at liberty to utter any and every nonsense, attend to all worldly things first, read newspapers, quarrel with one's family and servants, and then after bath, hastily perform one's Sandhya and then go to one's business, excusing oneself very legitimately that there was no time! The rule of the Brahma-muhurta, as the most appropriate time for the Sandhya and the recitation of the Gayatri, would then be absolutely null and void. This is absurd. In none of the authoritative

Smriti and ritual works is laid down that bath is necessary before the Sandhya. The cleaning of the teeth and bath are essentially hygienic items and though must be attended to daily, they cannot be allowed to interfere with the Brahma-muhurta sandhya, if one can't take his bath early in the morning, (and one ought to make it a habit to get up at about 4 or at the latest at 5 A. M.) after attending to the necessary calls of nature and some washing just enough to clean one's hands and face and rinsing one's mouth, one ought at once to begin one's Sandhya adoration. When this over with due meditation, one ought to recite the Sacred Gayatri till, in the morning the stars disappear from the sky, and the sun begins to appear on the horizon (and then will come the time for daily bath, etc.), and in the evening till the stars begin to shine in the heavens. As for the recitation of the Sacred Gayatri at other times, that must be done throughout the day and night, whenever one has health and consciousness enough to utter those, little, easy ten words of Vedic Sanskrit. Men, women, and children, all who have their senses sound and are not insane, must observe this rule, to which there is no exception.

NOTES

V. B. For notes 1—7 see the author's preface,

<sup>8</sup>In the original the most unscientific numbering of the Bashkala recension into Ashtaka, Adhyaya, Varga and mantra is followed. We have substituted for it the very scientific division into Mandala, Sukta and mantra. This text is also the "peace-prayer"—shantipatha—of the Taittirriyopanishad, Part I.

<sup>9</sup>The translation is ours. A separate translation is given wherever confusion is apt to arise from the original. Some corrections have and to be made in the original which are explained in these notes. where necessary.

<sup>13</sup>The word शत्रु is derived from the root शद्लु 1st conjugation meaning to 'perish' by affixing the Unadi suffix क्तु U IV, 103, and signifies 'one who perishes,' and when the causal sense is implied, 'one who kills,' the form in both cases being the same. Nobody dies or kills unless it is God's will that somebody should. न जायते म्रियते वा विपश्चिन्नायं कुतश्चिन्न बभूव कश्चित् । अजो नित्यः शाश्वतोऽयं पुराणो न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे ॥ कठ २।१८. शत्रु also means 'the wicked person who is inimically inclined towards the righteous, the weak and helpless.'

study. But knowledge of the soul and God is attained through an unflinching, unalloyed faith, giving rise to the experience of the ever continuing presence of these two great Entities. No study is conclusive here. Study is essential in all cases, but it is not decisive in the acquisition of these two.

<sup>15</sup> God and Nature do not intend that one should be subject to any physical ills. They are, indeed of one's own making.

<sup>16</sup> Greed though inordinate, for something good, for example, spiritual perfection, called in the language of the science of Yoga, उत्कटवेराग्यम्, an intensely powerful attitude to renounce the world, is a very high qualification distinguishing one for spiritual advancement.

Yogasutra, I. 26.

<sup>19</sup> Derived from वृ to elect, U. III, 53, means both the elector and the elected.

<sup>20</sup> सनद्वाजं बिप्रगेर तरुत्र धनस्पृतं शूशुवांसं सुदत्तम् ।
दस्युहनं पूर्भिदमिन्द्र सत्यमस्मभ्यं चित्रं वृशाणं रयिन्दाः ।

The whole of the hymn No. 47 of Book IX of the Rigveda, of which this is the 4th stanza, describes beautifully what sort of wealth man should endeavour to acquire.

<sup>23</sup> The word पूर्वभिः in this stanza does not mean “the ancients,” that is, those belonging to bygone ages who are no longer in flesh and blood amongst us, but those that are the teachers, guides, and leaders of mankind whether today amongst us, or were considered to be such by human society of the past ages. Similarly, नूतनः signifies those who are undergoing training now or were doing so in the past. The idea embraces the future time also.

<sup>26</sup> अरम् and अलम् are not identical, as the foolish principle क्षरयोरभेदः fabricated by later pseudo grammarians to justify their own faulty pronunciation and wrong interpretation of Vedic texts, is of no value in Vedic exegesis. अलम् is derived from the root अल meaning to adorn or be sufficient, and अरम् from the root ऋ to go.

<sup>27</sup> In the original सर्वात्मामे पान करो is not a happy expression. Though metaphorical, it has an anthropomorphic ring in it.

<sup>28</sup> The original paraphrase of this stanza is very corrupt and baffles all attempts at translation. We give it below:— हे परात्पर परमात्मन् ! आप “पुरुत्तमम्” अत्यन्तोत्तम और सर्वशत्रुविनाशक हो तथा बहुविध जगत् के ईशान (स्वामी) और उत्पादक हो, वार्याणाम्’ वर, वरणीय, परमानन्द मोक्षादि पदार्थों के भी ईशान हो । […… “सोमे” और…… उत्पत्तिस्थान संसार आपसे उत्पन्न होने से “इन्द्रम्” परमैश्वर्यवान् आपको (अभि प्रगायत) हृदय में अत्यन्त प्रेम से गावें (यथावत्) स्तुति करें जिससे आपकी कृपा से हम लोगों का भी परमैश्वर्य बढ़ता जाय और परमानन्द का प्राप्त हों ।]

In this passage, the dots are ours and indicate ellipses which cannot easily be filled without doing violence to the other portions of the text. We however, substitute the following for the portion enclosed by us within rectangular brackets:— आप सब लोकलोकान्तरों के सभी प्राणियों के निरीक्षक होने से, सोमे’ और हमारे ऐहिक जीवन के लिए आवश्यक सभी भौतिक पदार्थों का उत्पत्तिस्थान संसार आप ही से उत्पन्न होने से, हम मदा ‘इन्द्रम्’ परमैश्वर्यवान् आपका यश (अभि-प्रगायत) हृदय में अत्यन्त प्रेम से गावें और दूसरों के सम्मुख आपकी (यथावत्) स्तुति करें जिससे आपकी कृपा से हम लोगों का भी परमैश्वर्य बढ़ता जाय और हम सब मिलकर परमानन्द को प्राप्त हों ऐसी सुबुद्धि हमें प्रदान कीजिए ।

We now append a full translation of the reconstructed original paraphrase, “Oh Supreme Spirit, Greater than the greatest of beings, Thou art पुरुत्तमम् of surpassing excellence and पुरूणाम् the Exterminator of the foes of the righteous, the innocent the poor and helpless. ईशानम् Thou art the Maker and Lord of the multifarious universe and of every object in it. वार्याणाम्. Thou art the Master and Disposer of all choice things that come within the scope of human desires including even the highest bliss of final emancipation. O Lord, vouchsafe us the good sense that realising that Thou art the Supreme Controller of various spheres of existence and of all creatures, and that as सोमे the world, the source of all material things necessary for our life, has originated from Thee (as its efficient cause), it is but meet that we should, in our hearts अभिप्रणयत् sing with great fervour इन्द्रम् the infinite glory of Thee, the Great Master of all power and pelf, and also extol Thee before others, so that our prosperity may by Thy grace, advance and सचा we may all together सुत attain the highest bliss."

<sup>29</sup> This is an exact rendering of the lucid original. It is strange that such a lengthy and difficult Vedic text should be so carefully handled by the same original writers who so miserably bungled over the comparatively smaller and easier previous text.

<sup>30</sup> The little bit पाहि धूर्तेररावणः is very wonderful indeed. धूर्ति and अरावन् here describe only one person and not two. These two bad traits are found together in most cases today. From the conductors of modern governmental systems down to the very beggars trudging in the streets uttering plaintive cries, a majority of people can be described by these two epithets at once. Examples of the separate existence of these horrible vices are not at all rare. We may confidently assert that the major part of humanity is divided amongst these three types of people. Any how, it should be noted that a fraudulent person who is not at the same time miserly or niggardly, is more than a tolerably good gentleman. If he cheats or robs rich Peter, it is perhaps only to succour poor Paul. To be niggardly is a sin with him, but high patterns of this virtue are vey rare. On the other hand an extremely rich and good charactered man may be very niggardly. He may not give a brass farthing to a beggar, he may not give a morsel of grub to a hungry person, but at the same time he may never cheat anybody even for the whole world.

<sup>31</sup> This translation and the original paraphrase are both useful for an accurate understanding of the text. In the original paraphrase, however, there is much confusion which is got over in the rendering.

<sup>32</sup> It should be किञ्च परम् or परम् किञ्च. By a clerical error the word परम् has been prefixed to आकाश.

<sup>33</sup> Clerical error has deprived this verb एषि of its prefix आ without which the sense in the paraphrase attributed to it cannot be justified.

of Patanjali on P. VII, 1, 39 namely, तिङा च तिङो भवन्तीति वक्तव्यम् (which statement from its construction seems to be a Vartika of Katyayana) that is, "it should be stated that any tense form of a verb can, in the style of the Vedas, be used in the place of any other." It is here used in the sense of the Present Indefinite. This is quite a good case of Vedic style.

<sup>37</sup> On the surface, there seems to be a clerical error here. बर्हिस् = यज्ञ and the suffix मतुप् shows excellence. Vide Unadi, II, 109, and P.V, 294 and the Sangraha text quoted in the Mahabhashya, namely भूमनिन्दाप्रशंसासु नित्ययोगं ऽतिशयने । सम्बन्धे ऽस्मिन् विवक्षायां भवन्ति मतुवादयः. In the present case निन्दा cannot be the import of the suffix, in as much as the word बर्हिस् = a 'good work,' or advancement. It is very probable that this is no error at all but a very cunningly formed compound of बर्हिस् and मन्थ meaning to destroy. The irregularity here, if any, is negligible.

<sup>38</sup> This text, however, admits of another and a more appealing interpretation in which, God would be represented as ordering the King, leader, teacher, patriarch, father, elder, pater-familias, guide, etc, that is any one in the control of affairs and charged with the care of people, to use his or her discriminative faculty and influence in safeguarding the interests of those in his or her charge by warding off the undesirable. In this interpretation the form विजानीहि would be Imperative.

<sup>39</sup> The original अन्त इतना है यह न हो though irregular according to the rigid, recalcitrant, Hindi idiom' is the exact equivalent of the English expression 'God forbid' etc.

<sup>40</sup> In his commentary on the Nasadiya hymn RV.I, 29,2, the author interprets the term स्रवा to mean स्वसामर्थ्य and equates it to प्रकृति, primordial or causal matter.

<sup>41</sup> The bit उध्वदेश में रक्षा करो does not describe life after death as enjoyable in a particular place called 'heaven'. It cannot be rendered into 'the higher,' or upper regions.'

<sup>42</sup> A prayer for the grant of the greatest enjoyment of happiness seemed selfish and sensual. Hence this bit.

<sup>43</sup> The author, like all sensible people, knew that the wretched 'passport' system of the so-called civilised Governments today is a symbol of the worst form of slavery.

<sup>44</sup> The emancipation of souls is neither a chime-ra nor something attainable after death. It is a hard reality and has to be realised in one's earthly life itself. here, and now.

<sup>45</sup> Submission to, countenancing, and toleration of any type of slavery, is a great sin in the 'eyes' of God.

<sup>51</sup> The original is confused and full of gaps. It requires the insertion of हों after. धनाढ्य जन. So also insertion of वः उत्तयः before अनेहमः and of तथा रक्षा after सुख are also very necessary.

<sup>52</sup> The original has व उत्तयो व उत्तयः in which सु should be substituted for the second वः and आपकी की हुई रक्षाही सर्वोत्तम रक्षा है has to be added at the end. Our translation follows this line. The “too many cooks” employed by the simple-hearted Dayananda “have completely spoilt his broth” See n. 130.

<sup>53</sup> In the original we have the ponderous epithet सत्यस्यप्रकाशैकघनमय which is not very easy to translate in as much as a cloud, घन, is generally associated with darkness and not light. Here it should be taken to mean only a ‘flood’ or ‘expanse of light’.

<sup>54</sup> The original has हम निश्चित सुख स्वरूप हों which is not to be taken literally since it is only God that can be happy or blissful by His very स्वरूप or nature.

<sup>59</sup> In the original, by clerical error, पाञ्चजन्यः and मरुत्वान् are interpreted alike. We have varied the rendering.

<sup>60</sup> The rectangular brackets are ours. This stanza also clearly refers to the four Vedas by the term वचोविदः

<sup>61</sup> हमारा पाप सब नष्ट हो जाय in the original can only mean this, since, what is past cannot be undone even by God. The accumulated store of the results of the actions of the past which is not yet enjoined for enjoyment during the present life, can surely be wiped out by the efforts of the devotee backed by the grace of God. But sins are never remitted.

<sup>70</sup> The Vedic Lore cannot and must not be considered on a footing of equality with inanimate things. Faith in God and His Truth requires that we should speak of the Vedas in a very reverent tone. For the same reason, the printed or written text of the Vedas or any part of them should be handled with a reverent attitude. It is the absolute lack of such a training that is at the root of the widely prevalent infidelity against the Vedas in India today, and it is also responsible for the nonexistence of a single all correct edition of the Vedas, whereas the Bible and the Koran can present any number of good and correct editions. It is also the cause of the Vedas being printed not even once in ten years all over the world today, while the Bible and the Koran are printed almost many times over every year.

<sup>75</sup>(a) विश्वम् आ समन्तात् हन्ति इति = विश्व+आ+हन् +ङ = विश्वाहा, the indiscriminate destroyer of anything and every thing.

(b) विश्वानि च तानि अहानि or विश्व च तत् अहन् = on all days, always.

(c) अपः = the prefix or particle अप used as a noun or a declinable like सु in st. 29 above.

<sup>77</sup> Rectangular brackets are ours. This is an adaptation. We have rejected as spurious the passage in the original referring to golden vessels, etc. which is already mentioned in a way.

<sup>78</sup> This includes also robust woman, without whom the existence of robust men is of no avail. Hence we have added the matter in the rectangular brackets here and later on to make the point clear.

<sup>80</sup> It should always be borne in mind that it is just only to pray for the good, the righteous, and the generous, and never for the evil, wicked, oppressive, and harmful. A prayer for the transformation of the nature of the evil, etc., of course, is always opportune. Hence, such prayers as:—
योऽस्माद्धेष्टि यं वयं द्विष्मस्तं वो जम्भे दध्मः, AV. III, 27, 1—6 are quite legitimate and good. However, the person who prays must himself or herself be good in the eyes of God, otherwise the prayer will be useless. If a wicked person were to pray earnestly to God for the destruction of another wicked person, God's position would surely be very awkward, for according to His just and impartial nature He will have to kill both.

<sup>81</sup> & <sup>82</sup> The original text here is very confused and verbose. Hence we have had to adapt it a good deal so as to make the author's sense clear in the translation.

<sup>84</sup> The style of Nos. 1 and 2 is very prolix mostly faultless, and good 'Hindi'. Hence the reason advanced by some that the horrible mistakes in some places that mar the work are due to the author's lack of acquaintance with the idiom, hold no water.

<sup>86</sup> See Chapter VII. This subject is dealt with in the ऋग्वेदादिभाष्यभूमिका also which was written later. But it is only an introduction to the author's Vedic commentary referred to in the preface to this treatise.

<sup>87</sup> ".....it is the fault and corruption of the Nature of every man, that naturally is ingendered of the offspring of Adam: whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and is of his own nature inclined to evil so that the flesh lusteth always contrary to the spirit....." Article IX of the Anglican Church drawn up in 1571 in the reign of Queen Elizabeth of England.

The above is not Vedic teaching, Man is not naturally concupiscent. The Vedas teach that everything is perfect.

पूर्णात्पूर्णांमुदचनि पूर्णं पूर्णेभ मिच्यते ।

उतो तदद्य विद्याम् यतस्तत्परिचिच्यते ॥ AV, X,8,29.

"From the Perfect Supreme Being (as the efficient cause) the perfect (created universe) takes its rise, and this latter perfect is sprinkled all over (completely pervaded all over and permeated through and through) by the Perfect, and hence, may we today (in this very earthly life) attain that Perfect by which that other perfect is sprinkled all over." Again पूर्णमदः पूर्णमिदं पूर्णात्पूर्णांमुदच्यते । पूर्णस्य पूर्णमादाय पूर्णमेवावशिष्यते ॥ ओ३म । शान्तिः शान्तिः शान्तिः ॥

This is the 'shantipatha'—peace-prayer—offered at the commencement of certain Upanishads. It means:—

“That Subtle Being (the Supreme Being, the soul and the primordial matter) is perfect, and perfect also is this created multifarious universe which we see, for it from perfect (as the efficient or material cause), perfect be taken (as effect), what remains must necessarily be perfect.”

Everything is perfect in its own way adapted in the best possible manner for the purpose for which it exists. If man is concupiscent by nature, it is wrong to condemn him. If Queen Elizabeth seriously believed in this so-called “doctrine”, it was her Christian duty not to have condemned her own nephew, the Duke of Essex, to death. It is however, a case of the concupiscent falling foul of the concupiscent, perhaps, and so the the doctrine may be conceded the perfection it is alleged to possess. Again, if the “Adam's business” is not genuine history which it does not at all seem to be in the least, the doctrine of concupiscence itself being based upon a falsity must necessarily be false. But here again, a goodly conjecture comes to its rescue. It is advanced to justify the political, moral, and religious imperfections, and sins of commission and omission, of the Europeans who being a highly civilised and politically powerful race must also necessarily be highly concupiscent.

<sup>96</sup> The expression यजुर्बेदाभिप्रायार्थसहित is extremely difficult to render, as the term अभिप्रायार्थ is a very curious one, used only by the author and no other scholar of note. Our rendering is faultless.

<sup>97</sup> The language of the original is rather cryptic. The Samaveda, it should be remembered, applies the principles of the Vedic Lore to spiritual discipline. Most of the textual matter of the Samaveda is identical with that of the Rigveda but there is only repetition of expression, resorted to for economy's sake, the ideas of the two being entirely different. No commentator has as yet succeeded in throwing full light on this side of the Samaveda.

<sup>99</sup> प्राण is the superior or upper vital force and अपान the inferior, nether or lower.

<sup>101</sup>This point is not at all touched upon in the original. The word तृतीये 'third', is simply repeated, the explanation given being of द्वितिये the second <sup>102</sup>The second sphere is subtle material in which the bodiless विदेह and the mergers in primordial matter प्रकृतलय lie inactive, immobile, and unconscious. See the Yogasutra of Patanjali, I,19:

भपप्रत्ययो विदेहप्रकृतिलयानाम्.

<sup>103</sup>यस्मात्परं नापरमस्ति किञ्चिद्यस्मान्नाणीयो न ज्यायो

“To whom nothing else superior exists, than whom there is nothing subtler or greater; He who stands firm like a tree immoveable in the whole universe—wherever there is space and even beyond—That One God,—He completely pervades this whole universe.”

Quoting this the 9th stanza from the 3rd Chapter of the Shvetashvataropanishad in support of his interpretation Yaska in the 3rd Section of the 2nd Chapter of his Nirukta rightly maintains that the word 'purusha' पुरुष is derived from the root पृ meaning 'to be perfect' or 'to fill', pervade, etc.

<sup>104</sup>By clerical mistake, the two bits वीर्यं मयि वेदि and बलं असि were dropped from the original paraphrase. This is probably a blunder of either the amanuensis, copyist, or compositor.

<sup>105</sup>यज्ञ is the name of God. See, Shatapatha-brahmanam, III,1,4,15, I,1,1,13; XII,1,8,8; etc.

In the original of this quotation the word श्रुति is mischievously used by the amanuensis or copyist, which simply means that the Aitareya Satapatha and other Brahmanas are also 'parts of the Vedas.' This was never the opinion of the author, Swami Dayananda Sarasvati, who has clearly stated in his Rgvedadibhasyabhūmika that the name Veda or Sruti can rightly be given only to the four Vedas and to no other text. The word 'brahmanam', itself by derivation, means 'an exposition of Brahma or Veda' or 'some thing based upon or originating from the Vedas, 'Brahma' and not 'Brahma' itself.

<sup>106</sup>There is great confusion in the original paraphrase of this stanza which we have tried our utmost to clear in the translation. आपकी आपणा-पालन और आपकी प्राप्ति हो जिससे उस क्रिया में सदा तत्पर रहें in the original is an incomplete or irregular statement, for, it is not clear what is meant by उस क्रिया में unless we read the line as जिस क्रिया में उससे. Not only this portion but the whole of the paraphrase is corrupt showing clear signs of interference by half-learned and heretically inclined officious assistants.

<sup>107</sup>The word अग्नि means 'soul' and 'God' besides containing many other ideas. See, Satapathabrahmanam, 1,3,3,9; III,2,2,7; VI,7,1,20; VII,3,1,20; X,2,1,2,4; VI,5,3,7; etc. Taittiriya-brahmanam. III,3,10,2; Gopathabrahmanam, 1,1,33; Jaiminiyopanishadbrahmanam. IV, 27 1; Sadvim-brahmanam asI. 1, Kausitakibrahmanam, IX 1,5;

XII, 8; etc.

<sup>108</sup>The bits within the rectangular brackets inserted by us to make the sense of the original clear.

<sup>109</sup>The word तुथः means ब्रह्मन् the Supreme Being. See, Satapathabrahmanam, IX IV 3, 4, 14. Here also in the original word श्रुति is mischievously tacked on.

<sup>108b</sup> The bits within rectangular brackets are inserted by us. The matter of the paraphrase is abstruse and difficult and there is a lot of confusion imported into it wilfully by the amanuensis and copyist. We have tried our utmost to clear the thing.

<sup>110</sup>The simple syllable क is one of the names of God, and means प्रजापति. See:—Aitareyabrahmanam, II,38; III, 21; VI, 21; Kausitakibrahmanam, V, 4; XXIV, 4;5;9; Satayathabrahmanam, VI, 2, 2, 5; 4, 3, 4; VII, 3, 1, 20; Tandyamahabrahmanam VII,83; Jaiminiyopanisadbhahmanam, III, 2, 10; Gopathabrahmanam, II. 1, 22; 6, 3; Taittiriyaabrahmanam, II, 2, 5, 5.

<sup>111</sup>गच्छतीति—गम्=ब्रह्म—तद्धरतीति स गन्धर्वः ।
सर्वगत ब्रह्म को जो धारण करने वाला उसका नाम गन्धर्व है।

This is the author's note. It means:—gandharva is the epithet of that person who upholds (in all his thoughts, word, and deeds in daily life) the Supreme Being that pervades all".

<sup>112</sup>The matter within the rectangular brackets is inserted by us to clarify and embellish the original the idea of which is maintained intact.

brahmanam, II, 4, 2, 24; 6, 1, 42; VII, 4, 1, 30;
IX, 1, 1, 16.

<sup>114</sup>In the original we have ओत्रादि अंग तथा सेनादि उपांग in which the word सेनादि is put in through clerical error, for this cannot be a subordinate part of any sense organ or limb of the animal body. An army is a limb of the "regal body" of the king, and one of the troops or regiments composing it is its subordinate part. What were the original words, or what exactly did the author of Aryabhinaya dictate the amanuensis to write it is impossible to guess now.

<sup>115</sup>There is great confusion in the original here due to the perfunctoriness of the amanuensis in taking down correctly what was dictated.

<sup>116</sup>Seriousness and sincerity in doctrinal matters, a firm faith in the excellence of Vedic teachings, complete subordination of all ones' life's concerns to the study of and research into the Vedas devoting one's whole time to it, truthfulness in thought, word, and deed, are essential. Without these, mere abstract, unrelated-to life, Vedic research is bogus research and will do no good to anybody, but will surely cause unnecessary expense of a lot of money.

<sup>117</sup>Those of us who talk of political freedom very little understand the causes of the loss of it.

It is a punishment ordained by Divine wrath that people for their past and even present wickednesses would lose their political freedom and become enslaved to outsiders. It is a very great weakness of character, a great sin, an unpardonable crime, to give preference to foreigners where our own brethren have to be provided with the wherewithals of life. By neglecting vedic teachings, that is, the true law of morality and justice, people do away with the firm foundation of their own social and political life. With the enslavement and debasement of womanfolk they make further provision for such foolishness. With the degradation of those who serve and are artisans and manual labourers they create their own internal foes. When in the end they invite or harbour foreigners, adopt foreign manners, ape foreigners, use foreign languages or hybrid mixtures of foreign with their own idioms, and throw away the study of their ancient and classical languages describing them as dead languages, the last step in the downward move is complete, the ultimate result of all this being loss of independence and political, economical, and moral enslavement to the foreigner. Enslavement to a foreigner is possible only when that foreigner himself is a slave to some great evil, especially spiritual or moral evil. A nation or country well founded on a thoroughly spiritual and moral basis of practical life will feel it degrading to harm others, to impose their political yoke on other people, however weak the latter might be. Spiritually and morally strong people do not enslave others, but it is only the slaves who do so. Hence when a nation or country gets enslaved its downward trend of degradation becomes extremely fast, the ultimate fall being so unexpectedly serious and horrible that the cleverest heads fail to devise any useful remedy. In all such cases self-introspection is extremely necessary. The first step should be to do away with heretical teaching. All other measures will then quickly follow suit and all will be well. It is not possible to do away with a foreigner at once. The presence of the foreigner is a dangerous gangrenous wound the operation of which may result in the death of the patient. Hence to strengthen the patient spiritually and morally is essential. This is possible only through such prayers and meditations as are laid down in this book. The foreigner will then cease to be a foreigner. To the Vedas none is a foreigner.

<sup>120</sup>This is a very fitting prayer to be recited everyday, morning and evening, by the king or leader of people.

as it is called in Sanskrit philosophical treatises, final emancipation as it is provisionally named by translators and 'final beatitude' as it is rightly called by some? Who earns or enjoys it? These are very relevant questions but not easy to answer. Opinions differ as to what mukti is, but there is this much of agreement that it is not a state to be attained after death. It is to be attained in this earthly existence itself, and he or she who fails to earn it now will never earn it. There is agreement on this point also that it is a state of perfection in which all blemishes, weaknesses, concupiscences, and fetters are totally got rid of. To know this much of this great topic is a good thing, for, every enquirer can start from here as the basis and speculate. About the second question, namely, who earns mukti, no sufficient light has been provided by any thinker, Indian or foreign, that would help the enquirer in understanding clearly the requisite minimum qualifications of the embodied soul that earns mukti.

We have explained this point at great length in the Introduction to our edition of the Yajur-Veda to which the reader is referred.

<sup>123</sup>The Vedas tell things in the simplest language and very bluntly. They maintain that man's destined age is only one hundred years and nothing more. Some exceptions there may be, for there are exceptions to every rule, who may be said to have lived much longer than this. But they are only exceptions and do not contradict the general Vedic principle. The Vedas do admit that there may be such exceptions. This view of taking man to be a 'centenary' animal is really scientific. Woman's body ceases to function as puerperal 'machine' after menopause in about the fiftieth year of her age. Some twenty years more of strenuous work for the maintenance of the children and a little more than that period, of inanition, brings her life to a century. This is woman's exact position. She cannot get over it. To extend her life, would necessitate also resuscitation or rejuvenation of her sexual functions which is impracticable. Man's age also must be the same as woman's irrespective of his sexual functions, for some men are known to have had their procreative faculty unimpaired even up to the eightieth year of their age. Such cases are not rare even today. But considering the worry and responsibility of supporting the family man also must be expected to stop procreating almost about the same time as woman.

<sup>124</sup> It is not a long life that matters but how life is used by man. A long life lived like a beast is not at all desirable. The Vedas do not expect, much less ordain, a man or woman to live long like a parasite or a wild beast. They say that a man can live only for a hundred years and that period he should utilise in the most beneficial manner to himself and to others.

said elsewhere, as a measure of punishment meted out by Divine justice. अदीन means not mean or low, and दीन, its opposite, therefore, means, mean or low. No man or woman can lower or demean himself or herself. God forbids everybody from behaving thus.

नात्मानमत्रमन्येत पूर्वाभिरममृद्धिभिः
आमृत्योः श्रियमन्विच्छन्नैनाम्न्येत दुर्लभम् ॥

“One must not lower or demean oneself in one’s own estimation or in that of others on account of one’s past failures, but should ever aspire after greatness even till the time of one’s death never believing it to be unattainable.”

The greatest loss of freedom is demeaning oneself. Only those people lose their freedom who demean themselves.

<sup>126</sup> These ten prayers are only typical, on the model of which any number may be composed according to need. It should also be noted that these prayers are to be offered only at the initiation of the undertaking, privately at least, if not also publicly during the ceremonial of initiation by the party concerned, and not afterwards, that is, while the work thus begun is in the doing. Then of course, a different prayer, based on the same principle will have to be offered by the person every morning. In the evening, at the end of the day’s work or at night, the exercitant should offer the following prayer:—

अग्ने व्रतपते व्रतमचारिषं तदशकं तन्मेऽराधिदमहम्
यऽ एवास्मि सोऽस्मि ॥ २ । २८ ॥

“Oh Lorb God, Effulgent Protector of our vows, the solemn vow of truthfulness in thought, word, and deed, enjoined upon me by Thee, that by Thy Grace, have I fully accomplished today as I could, for, whatever I am without Thy help, I am of myself unable to carry any great undertakings to completion.”

The necessary variations given in the above prayer may or may not be introduced in this which is only a continuation and completion of the former.

The English rendering given above by us is an adaptation and enlargement of the original.

<sup>127</sup>The repetition of the words मन्तु आशिषः indicates the ardent fervour for God and impatience of the devotee. In the Yajur-Veda this stanza ends with-उपहृता पृथिवी मातोष मां पृथिवी माता ह्यतामग्निराग्न धात्स्वाहा

<sup>128</sup>Repeated entreaties to God imply great love for Him and impatience on the part of the devotee to have his prayers granted. Nothing is so good as understanding. If a human being has understanding, he or she will surely have all happiness. Hence it is right to entreat God frequently for intelligence. (The Author).

<sup>129</sup>The author failed somehow to give the date (17-10-1941) of completion of this work.

<sup>130</sup>The following documentary evidence is adduced to prove that Dayananda's works were intentionally as well as through ignorance spoilt by the servants and helpers he employed to write, print or read the proofs of:—( १ ) स्वामी दयानन्द सरस्वती जी महाराज ने जो चिट्ठियाँ वैदिक यन्त्रालय के कर्मचारी पंडित ज्वालादत्त, मुन्शी समर्थानन आदि को भजी हैं उनसे भली-भांति प्रतीत होता है, कि वेदभाष्यों की संस्कृत तो स्वामी जी महाराज की है, परन्तु हिन्दी समग्र स्वामी जी के पास काम करने वाले पंडितों की बनाई हुई है। इन चिट्ठियों से यह भी ज्ञात हो जायगा कि संस्कृत का भी संशोधन जहाँ तहाँ पंडितों ने किया है। स्वामी जी को यह भी ज्ञात था कि उनके किये हुए ग्रंथों में पंडितों ने अपनी टिप्पणियाँ भी लिखी हैं यह भी इन चिट्ठियों से ज्ञात होता है। स्वामी जी के आधीन काम करने वाले पंडितों की कितनी योग्यता थी तथा उनकी वैदिक सिद्धांतों में कितनी रुचि थी, इसका भी परिचय पाठकों को इन चिट्ठियों से हो जायगा। Harabilas Sarda's preface to Dayananda Granthamala Vol. 1

( ३ ) महाराज के कर्मचारियों में एक दिनेशगम लेखक था। वह ऊपर से तो बड़ा भक्त बना रहता, परन्तु भीतर से स्वामी जी के कार्यों में जान बूझकर अशुद्धियाँ कर देता। स्वामी जी के सम्मुख वह बड़ी चिकरी चुपड़ी बातें करता, पर उनकी पीठ पीछे दूसरे कर्मचारीयों को कहता कि “यह साधुदा हम लोगों के हथकंडों को क्या जाने ? हम अपने चानुर्य से इसके ग्रन्थों में ऐसी ऐसी बातें मिला देंगे और इस प्रकार मिला देंगे कि उनका पता इसे प्रलयकाल तक भी न लगेगा ॥ “Dayananda Prakasha”, by Swami Satyananda, p. 448 (Calcutta).

<sup>131</sup>This is the main and essential purpose of the sipping which completely sets at rest any doubt the objector can raise on the ground of reason or science. The secondary purpose which has no scientific explanation to satisfy the objector is that it is a “symbolical” act signifying all round purification, physical as well as moral. Water pervades as well as purifies, but it does cleanse only when it pervades. It fails entirely to cleanse when it is obstructed and remains stagnant in a place. In the same manner we should contemplate God as pervading the whole of our being by His Providence and Grace if we really intend seriously to be sanctified.

<sup>132</sup>From their construction, these bits do not seem to be the texts of any Vedic recension. They are taken from some ritualistic aphorisms, or composed by the author himself.

From the words वाक् speech, चक्षुस् eye, and श्रोत्रम् ear, the objection could have been raised that this particular prayer, and then the Sandhya adoration itself, was intended only for those who had all the organs of their bodies sound and clearly excluded those who did not have that blessing. From our rendering, however, this objection has no occasion.

While reciting these Sanskrita words the devotee should try to remember how he or she utilised these parts of his or her body during the period of time elapsing between the last Sandhya adoration and this.

<sup>133</sup>Here the exercitant should feel compunction for his or her infirmities, and then reciting the Sanskrita words meditate upon each expression as interpreted in the translation.

<sup>134</sup>While uttering mentally, and meditating over each of these seven Sanskrita expressions, perform deep breathing in the following manner:—Sit at ease in some much convenient posture as the Siddhasana, the easiest way of sitting on the haunches. Straighten and erect your whole body, but do not lay any pressure, and not exert any force anywhere on your person, but on the other hand let it loose and try to feel yourself at complete ease and comfort. Then normalise your breathing, so that there is absolutely no weight anywhere in your lungs or throat. Then, while uttering each of the above expressions, and meditating upon the sense of each, take a slow, quiet, long breath, as long as you possibly can. Then, and this is the second step, try to retain, this inhaled breath as long as you conveniently can without exerting any force upon your lungs. When you feel the weight of the breath, give it out slowly only through the nostrils, for breathing, for pranayama is to be done only through the nostrils, and when all is given out, just hold yourself erect and contract the muscles of your pelvic and umbilical region, and hold it like that for some time, as long as you feel it convenient to do so. This is the third step during which the lungs are emptied of all breath and the ribs are drawn in with the muscles of the pelvic and umbilical region pulled inwards towards the back. Now when you feel no longer able to hold on like this, repeat the first step, by taking in a long and deep breath of fresh air, (letting loose the pelvic and umbilical muscles and releasing the ribs), all the while, mentally uttering the second of the above expressions and meditating upon its meaning.

This is the real pranayama of the Sandhya adoration. To put it in a nutshell, (1) you first take in a long breath, (2) then retain in your lungs the air taken in as long as you can or feel convenient to do so, (3) slowly let out the air breathed completely and at the end of it, pull up by contracting the muscles, the pelvic and umbilical region, pulling in the ribs towards the back, and keep like this for some time, the lungs being emptied of all air. This is one pranayama. One should regulate this according to one's strength. Begin with something like ten seconds or so. That is, let each step, spread over ten seconds, and not more. Then gradually increase the pace, but take care that this should remain within the limits of your devotional exercise, and do not convert it into the charlatanism of the Hatha-yogi. When the pace is increased, the exercise usually turns harmful in two ways, First, it encroaches upon your devotion, and becomes a mere anatomical exercise leading you nowhere. Or second, it injures you somewhere, either in the lungs or the bowels, and leaves you maimed for life. For a true devotee, that is for the really spiritually minded man or woman, the meditation is the most important, and the pranayama only an auxiliary towards it. While meditating deeply, the devotee loses all consciousness of the external world, and of even his or her body, and then the breathing of itself, and without any effort on the part of the exercitant, it becomes the most perfect pranayama. This is Dhyana-Yoga, which is the only true Yoga and it is this that is desired in the Sandhya, and not feats of deep breathing, spectacular and attractive.

<sup>135</sup>Here the exercitant should make it a habit to pray for political, social and economical freedom and happiness. There is nothing like such a prayer to impress upon our weak minds the necessity of taking steps to improve our lot in the world.

<sup>136</sup>Between here and the meditation of the Gayatri ought to come the third symbolical sipping of water or 'achamanam' to the accompaniment of the text शन्नो देवी etc., given on page 5.

<sup>138</sup>With this obeisance and the brief prayer for peace accompanying, ends the Sandhya adoration of Dayananda. He was an innovator here as elsewhere in his works in many respects.

The old Sandhya adoration fell of old into the hands of sectarians and came to be desecrated with the inclusion of sectarian verses of poetry idolatrous and otherwise evil, to the obscuration of the original Vedic texts. Also the sense of these texts was not at all cared for. The Sandhya was considered to be a sort of esoteric exercise attended with magical effects. Its spiritual and moral value was not at all cared for. At the most, the performer found favour with some charlatan sadhu guru, learnt the method of the Hatha-yogic pranayama, and varied and further desecrated his devotional exercise by diverting his attention from meditation on God and his own soul to the exact performance of the anatomical exercise of deep breathing. Such people, and they exist even today, considered themselves to be adepts in the esoteric science of Bhakti, and posed as men and women of great purity and sanctity of life. Obviously happened to be the most selfish and self-conceited, totally lacking in humility and having no feelings of civility towards any body. Their daily life was one continuous piece of hypocrisy shame and humbug. Their dealings with others were the most offensive and overbearing. One comes across such people even today in India. Their religion consists in regular baths and washings, marks on the forehead, despising the so-called Shudra, or untouchable, cooking and eating their meals in a particular place where nobody else is allowed to enter.

Such hypocritical people and their wretched gurus varied the Sandhya to such a horrible extent that it came to have hundreds of different schools and hence so many different methods and readings. Today it is very difficult to find the separate texts of all these schools, for the evil had its evil effect of killing the Sandhya itself. Now the religion of the hypocritical 'unco-good' consists in ablutions and cooking the meals and eating them in a secluded place

Dayananda was therefore, constrained to draw up a new and sensible, short and sweet method of the Sandhya adoration, and his Sandhya is today acknowledged by most sensible and pious Hindus to be the best. It is widely used all over India, even by some who are not of the Arya Samaj.

His most important innovation was the inclusion of AV. III, 27,-1-6, for मनसापरिक्रमा, the mental vision and meditation of God as prevailing all the quarters of universe. We do not know whether any sectarian Sandhya school included these texts before Dayananda; probably some did, but we do not find it today in the available sectarian Sandhya manuals.

He simplified the Sandhya, shortened it, and also purified it of all puranic dross. In his Sandhya, there is not even the slightest touch of idolatry or sectarianism. Even a Muslim or a Christian, if he understands the Sanskrit language cannot but concede that Dayananda's Sandhya is a really theistic devotional exercise fit for all.

Dayananda made the nature of the Sandhya adoration clear by the inclusion of the long Atharva-Vedic passage, III, 27, 1-6 referred to above, which fact the older schools deliberately obscured. This long text, proves that the Sandhya as such is a meditational exercise. This aspect of the Sandhya is the most important and must always be had in mind by the devotee. The pranayama, and all such merely physical adjuncts, are to serve only as auxiliaries. The Sandhya is a Yogic exercise, and by Yoga we mean only Dhyana-Yoga. Raja Yoga is merely another name for this. Hatha Yoga is an exercise for the development of the powers of the body and mind, mostly physical. A Dhyana-Yogi meditates on the true nature of his or her own soul and upon God, whereas a Hatha-Yogi may devote certain parts of his time even to the recidivistic contemplation of how to kidnap his neighbour's wife. For this ugly feature of the diabolical system we refer the reader to the wretched Haṭha-yogapradipika, than which, perhaps, human literature does not possess a more disgraceful piece of writing. Every man or woman does possess multifarious physical and mental powers which he or she can develop to a wonderful extent, and the Hatha-Yogic system advises you to develop the lowest of them to an abnormal extent and devote it to the enjoyment of the vilest of the pleasures of the pleasures of the senses. It is not rare to come across a charlatan sadhu who drinks gallons of liquor without getting drunk. We leave this topic here, warning the reader to shun this system, and take care not to get into the snares of a ha-hayogi.

In the Sandhya you simply and seriously meditate on the true nature of your own soul and on God with a view to improve yourself morally and spiritually. During this meditation the breathing becomes deep and long, quiet and level, without any conscious effort on your part, i.e., pranayama comes to you and you do not have to go in search of it. When the devotee becomes impervious to external sounds, ultimately attaining Samadhi, which is not only trance. Such contemplation sanctifies life and brings one nearer to God. This is the secret of Dayananda's Sandhya.

<sup>139</sup>Nos. 2, 3 and 7, of these stanzas of prayer will be found also in the Aryabhivinaya, as Nos. 20, and 48 of part I, and 6 of Part II.

<sup>140</sup>This is the meaning of the stanza in its context. The variation that is sometimes made by ritualists in the rendering of genuine original Vedic texts torn away from their contexts, just to suit the particular ritualistic act at the time of sacrifice, gives rise to the false impression that the text of the Vedas, at least the Yajur-Veda, was got up by ritualists, just to serve the purpose of chanting at sacrifices, and that it contains nothing but ritual formulae. We do not at all agree with this method of appropriating Vedic texts to the ritual. The recitation of Vedic texts at the time of sacrifice is intended to awaken the interest of the people in Vedic studies, hence we have given throughout only the 'neat' original renderings of the texts concerned. The sense, however, does, in some way, concern the ritual and this much is quite enough, Yaska in his Nirukta XIII, 12, says:—न तु पृथक्त्वेन मन्त्रा निर्वक्तव्याः चुक्रणश एव तु निर्वक्तव्याः, that is, Vedic texts are not to be torn away from their contexts and interpreted separately, but always with relation to their own contexts.
